after McColloch's Fort Wayne speech, the experiment of sudden contraction has not only resulted in a sudden and embarrassing check to business generally, but also in sending gold upward instead of down, and Government securities down instead of up, in other words results directly contrary to hose desired and aimed at, have, arisen from the attempted sudden contraction. But this is only a part of the result, in addition that there, will also be a serious diminution in the internal revenue receints, if the system is presisted in. This one month's experiment ought to satisfy the Secretary that it is impossible to reduce the price of an article in the markets, when a scarcity exists, by any other method than by reducing or supplying the demand; and that gold is no exception to this rule. Gold has been for four years, and still is, an article of commerce and by reason of the immense quantities exported our supply is short and unequal to the demands. The true way to bring our currency to a specie basis is to increase the duties on imports so as to reduce their volume until our exports balance them, this will stop the export of gold, it will soon begin to accumulate and we will have a gradual but permanent decline of the premium, and this result can be reached with but a very little or perhaps without any reduction of the currency Notwithstanding the persistent cry, of inflation, against the currency, the facts indicate that the actual increase is by no means so great as many imagine, in fact but little if any more than what is required by the increased business of the country. The State bank currency previous to the war was $207,000,000, the coin in circulation according to the calculations of those who have access to the statistics was $300,000,000 making in all $507,000,000. The currency to-day is about $707,000,000 making an increase in five years of extraordinary business activity and high prices of only $200,-000,000. Surely there is nothing in this exhibit to frighten a sensible people or their ous folly of precipitating upon the country

It is somewhat amusing to read the various comments of the Copperhead press upon the negro insurrection in Jamaica. There appears to be a nervousness manifested on their part that is truly agonizing. We imagine that they write with great drops of perspiration accumulating upon their clouded brows and then coming steadily and silently down their hardened cheeks, occasion ally one endeavors to put on air of calm demeanor and to moralize philosophically upon the probable success or failure of the insurrection, but beneath it, in traces as legible as the writing on the wall crops out the haggard visage of him whose soul is moved by the hideous throes of distracted fear. Reader do you comprehend this ghostly display of "raw head and bloody bones?" It is this: these enemies of the colored race time out of mind, have left no opportunity pass without misrepresenting the negro and endeavoring to prejudice the white race against him, and when they see him strike for manhood and liberty, a guilty conscience, charged with all the hideous deformity a distorted imagination can conjure, overtakes them, and with a more terrifying admonition, than an earthquake, tells them of their guilt. They imagine they already feel the cold and glittering steel of him whom they have wronged and persecuted. Ah. indeed, a guilty conscience makes cowards of them all. And from this phantasm they crowd away in the most abject fear. It is strange, very strange, that men are such impotent creatures that they fle from their own distended shadaws, however it is so, and it appears to be trebly so in the case of our Copperhead cotemporaries. We would pity the negro who would so far disgrace his race as to notice the ravings of these demagogues. We do not think there lives a colored man who holds the least resentment against those pitiable creatures for constantly berating them and their cause. Colored men have suffered loss of life, limb, property, every thing at their hands without any retaliation and if they could stand al this, and more, heretofore, they can afford to be magnanimous now. We would advise our cotemporaries then to brace up their trembling nerves, put on the air of manhood, at least, and do penance to atone for their former outrageous conduct, and the miserable negro will not disturb their midnight

THE Copperhead party before the war a full set of strings. The first string might be said to represent State Rights, the second Squatter Sovereignty, the third Secession and the fourth Slavery. One string after the other was swept away until now there is not a single string left to play upon nothing but the empty, dull "played out," old fiddle. No wonder there is no music in the late election huricane which has swept | catalogue the land of Copperheadism from one extremiof the country to the other.

THE Gazette of two weeks ago appears to think that the late elections were "considerably mixed." This was evidently a great mistake never in the history of the country was there so few of the opposition allowed to "mix." The Gazette, however was in a straight and in its affliction it may have found some consolation in some unimportant munnicipal result while we counted on larger things. Small potatoes answer very well when you can't get large ones. Speaking of potatoes reminds us that there is quite a similarity between the potato crop this season and the Copperhead party, both

PERIODICALS FOR DECEMBER. Harper's Monthly opens with an illustraed article "Making the Magazine" that is both interesting and instructive; "A com-mon story" by Miss Mulock;" "The natural wealth of Virginia," illustrated; "The Royal Portrait; "First and Lrst;" "Names of men;" Sally's Disappointment;" "Aspirations;" "Armadale" continued; The conclusion of "Our Mutual Friend" and a few shorter articles make up the number. The Atlantic Monthly (Ticknor & Fields Boston) for December has its usual variety of interesting matter, though hardly up to the average of previous numbers. The political article'Clemency and Common Sense by Charles Sumner is an interesting and suggestive discussion of the vexed question of reconstruction; Griffith Gaunt; or Jealousy is the title of a serial by Charles Read, beginning with this number, that gives promise of more than usual merit. These with "William Blackwood" and No. 11 of "Chimney Corner" papers are among the most readable of the fourteen articles contained in this number.

Our Young Folks (Ticknor & Fields, Bos ton) completes its first volume with the December number. Its success as the leading children's periodical in the country is placed beyond a doubt. Its publishers deserve the thanks of all who feel an interest in the youth of our land, for the manner in which they have carried out their original design exception of Governor Andrew, of of furnishing the best Juvenile literature in America. Humorous Poems by Oliver Wendell Holmes, is the title of the fifth volume of the series of Companion Poets for the people (Ticknor and Fields, Boston) containing ninety-seven select poems from the humorous writings of O. W. Holmes.

OUR MUTUAL FRIEND. - Mr. Dickens has evidently bestowed more than ordinary care upon "Our Mutual Friend." It is easy to perceive that this story was not written piecemeal, like Pickwick and Nickleby, but led labor, for the first time yields to the sug with unusual study to produce rather a wellbalanced and probable tale, than that succession of brilliant sensational effects, which are expected, like striking tableaux, at the close of every act in a drama, and every monthly cessation of the "to be continued" fiction. His readers, we dare say, missed these flashes in the present work; but, when perused as a whole, their absence is more than compensated for by the superior development of the plot. This is Mr. Dickens' best-built story. From the first, he had definite purposes to work out, by the dramatis personæ whom he created, and he steadily went on to that end, with little hesitation, pause or episode; One of the characters, Silas Wegg, is as great an original as Dickens ever drewwhich is saying a great deal-and his friend Venus is only too good for such society, 'Our Mutual Friend" himself, reticent and mysterious, is elaborated to a degree, but not too much. There is a great deal of humor in this story, more subdued than usual but it opens tragically, and the terrible passion of Bradley Headstone, the half-demen ted school-master looms out, gloomy and grand, like the murderer of Duncan, in 'Macbeth." We have merely glanced at the leading characters; it is not fair to anticipate the story-to take the kernel out of the nut, as it were. But, we tell the public, in confidence, that Dickens, like King Richard, is "himself again" in this tale, punishing vice and rewarding virtue, a literary Rhadamanthus.

Godey for December has arrived, and is an extra number. It contains a fine line engraving entitled "The Christmas Tree," a title page consisting of five tableaux, a double extension fashion plate colored, two other engravings and numerous patterns and styles of dress, bonnet trimmings, with a profusion of items particularly interesting to ladies. Godey's is without doubt the best magazine for ladies that can be found in America. Subscription $3 per annum. Address L. A. Godey, corner 6 & Chestnut streets, Phila.

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE-IMPOR-TANT IMPROVEMENTS.—The Winter term of this sterling institution will commence on Tuesday morning, December 5th. The term just closing has been one of the most successful in the history of the college. Its marvellous success, leading, as it does, every ladies' school west of the mountains, is the best comment on its superior advantages and excellent management. It now numbers among its patrons hundreds of our best citizens and those of other States. A most could have been compared to a violin with valuable improvement is now in progress. a new recitation room, a large and beautiful room for the cabinet and a spacious and elegant library and reading room will soon be completed and added to the already splendid facilties offered by the college to its pupils. We need hardily to repeat what we have so often stated, that in its literary and ornamental departments the college has no ethe party.
