

Farm, Garden & Household.

HINTS TO FARMERS.

A farmer should not imperil his title to land he already possesses, by over anxiety to obtain an additional number of adjoining acres.

He should not attempt to cultivate more land than he can attend to in season, or keep more stock than the farm will supply nutriment for.

He should not put off till to-morrow what needs to be done to-day; should not wait till a farming implement is wanting before ascertaining whether he has it, or if so, whether it is in condition to be used.

He should not let his stock run down so in the winter, that half the summer he is wasting in placing the animals where they should have been at the commencement of the spring.

He should not, when a field is planted, leave the straggling shoots to contend with weeds, until the latter become the prominent feature of the field.

He should not go to sleep overnight before first having determined what he and his help are to commence with in the morning, with means provided to make the labor effective.

He should not rely much on those he may employ; every household wants a head, no matter how faithful its hired members may be. This position belongs to the owner of the farm, and he should occupy it. He may labor or not as suits his inclination and means, but the direction of the affairs should remain with him.

He should not seek to get extra work out of his laborers by turning day into twilight or night. Laborers regard this practice as an imposition, and will become morose and discontented at the exertion. Besides exhausted nature requires a suitable time to recruit its energies, and should have it.

He should not give way to passionate language because of mistakes made or errors committed by his help. These are annoying, certainly, but the use of vile language and threat to repair the fault, nor lessen the chances of a repetition of it. Premeditated wrong doing should involve dismissal from service.

He should not, if hired from his business during a passing season by some trivial sport, be much surprised to find that his hired help has been enjoying a partial holiday during his absence.

He should not be indifferent to the physical comfort of those who serve him. None are exempt from sickness. Let him be kind and considerate to those who suffer. They will repay you by extra exertions when restored to health.

WINDGALL ON HORSES.

A lady writes to the Observer: "We have been watching the paper for a remedy for windgalls. We have a valuable horse made lame by them. If any one will give us any information with regard to the cause and their treatment, through your valuable paper, they will be greatly obliged."

We can assign a plausible and true cause of windgalls, yet the remedy is quite another consideration, while a preventive is still another.

Windgalls are the undue enlargements of small sacs on the limbs of horses, about the hocks and upper pastern joints. They are the natural and certain results of hard driving and straining the limbs by hauling, or carrying heavy loads. Those horses that have small and slender limbs, are far more liable to have windgalls than such as have large and strong legs. When young horses are put to heavy work, or are driven beyond their strength, or required to draw so heavy loads that they strain themselves, windgalls will soon appear on their legs. Horses that have not been over-worked nor strained before they are six years old, seldom have windgalls.

There are various ways of treating windgalls. Sometimes they are incurable; and the more they are tampered with, the worse it is for the animal. In some instances, the canter is employed to remove windgalls. Yet no one but a skillful veterinarian of extensive experience should attempt to apply this remedy. The best and most efficacious remedy that we have ever met with, is to procure a quart of a pound of arnica flowers, at the drug store, put it in a bottle, and fill the bottle with whiskey, and cork it tightly. After it has stood about one day, let the windgalls be bathed thoroughly with this liquid. Bathe and rub the legs and windgalls for five minutes with water, previous to applying the arnica and whiskey. If the horse is young, gentle driving and a thorough application of this remedy, will almost effect a cure after a few months. Windgalls on the legs of old horses will sometimes yield to the remedy. Yet in many instances the old horse will need to be rejuvenated before his windgalls can be cured.—New York Observer.

POINTS OF A GOOD HOG.

The mere name (breed of a hog) is not always a criterion of its excellence. Early maturity and a tendency to take on flesh, will do more towards making a hog valuable, than any other virtue contained in the mere title of Berkshire, Suffolk, &c., for it may possess more of the valuable qualities of the breed.

In the true Berkshire, the result of a cross between the Chinese and the Neapolitan varieties, we find the nearest approach to a desired standard, the chief points of which are as follows: The breast and loins should be broad, the bones and joints small, and the legs just long enough to prevent the belly from touching the ground; the feet should be firm, even, upright and sound; the head should be broad and thick; the snout short, and ears light, thin and incline slightly forward.

Nor is color to be overlooked in determining the breed of the animal. A dark skin and thin hair shows Neapolitan blood; a white skin and medium size indicate the Chinese breed, while a light or reddish hue, with dark spots, denotes the Berkshire.—Rural Americana.

TALKING WHEN MILKING.

We have seen it noticed some where, that talking while milking is not good—that a cow will give less milk, &c. We think we can say we have had experience in this way. It comes under the head of quick milking. A fast milker is better than a slow. Talking is very apt to retard milking; not only that—a milk cow will be uneasy where too much ado is, where another person is present, especially a stranger. We think we have seen a decrease of milk where a talking person was present. We prefer milking alone, and as fast as possible. Quietude and contentment are great qualities in a cow. A wild cow is not generally a good one. If she is, she will be much better when tamed and domesticated.

The Grover and Baker Elastic-Stitch Sewing Machines

are superior to all others for the following reasons:

1. They run direct from the spools, and require no rewinding of thread.
2. They are more easily understood and used, and less liable to derangement than other machines.
3. They are capable of executing perfectly, without change of adjustment, a much greater variety of work than other machines.
4. The stitch made by these machines is much more firm, elastic, and durable, especially upon articles which require to be washed and ironed, than any other stitch.
5. This stitch, owing to the manner in which the thread is wrought, is much the most plump and beautiful in its appearance, and retains this plumpness and beauty upon articles frequently washed and ironed until they are worn out.
6. The structure of the seam is such that, though it be cut or broken at intervals of only a few stitches, it will neither open, run, or ravel, but remain firm and durable.
7. Unlike other machines, these lasten both ends of the seam by their own operation.
8. With these machines, while silk is used upon the right or face side of the seam, cotton may be used upon the other side without lessening the strength or durability of the seam. This can be done on any article, and to a great saving upon all articles stitched or made up with silk.

These machines, in addition to their superior merits as instruments for sewing, by a change of adjustment, easily learned and practiced, execute the most beautiful and permanent embroidery and ornamental work.
