Democratic Ferocity in Resisting the Government,

DEMOCRATIC SYCOPHANCY IN RESTORING THE UNION.

How the men who uphold Andy Johnson Brutalized Union Prisoners!

UNION SOLDIERS IN ANDERSONVILLE PRISON.

SICKNESS,—STARVATION,—DEATH.

THE CONTRAST OF SUFFERING, ANDERSONVILLE & FORTRESS MONROE.

THE REBEL LEADER, JEFF DAVIS, AT FORTRESS MONROE.
HEALTH,—PLENTY,—LUXURY.

How Andy Johnson Caters to the Chief Brute of the Nation!

We leave our illustration to the reader's contemplation with only brief comments of our own. The men who brutalized our fathers, brothers and sons, as depicted, are those who now support Andy Johnson, those for whose benefit Heister Clymer seeks an election as Governor of Pennsylvania, that he may join the President in using the armed powers of the Keystone State to force the representatives of traitors into Congress. Contemplate the scene, freemen of Pennsylvania, and shudder! Andrew Johnson's policy is illustrated in the scene representing Jeff. Davis receiving the homage of Union-soldiers. Crawling to the feet of Jeff. Davis, is Heister Clymer's idea of Reconstruction! Voters of Pennsylvania, are you ready to confirm such a policy? If you are, support Heister Clymer.

THE MYSTERY OF SLEEP.—Chambers Journal says that twelve hundred millions of dreams make a net work of wild fancies nightly about our planet. To go, if it were possible, through this world of sleep, would be a stranger process than that of exploring the whole waking world, for, in sleep, every living being is a poet, from the baby that clings in its dreams to the breast of goddesses to the centenarian who with staff and spectacles, hobbles about paradise at the heels of seraphs. Sleeping and waking are the two great phenomena of our existence. What is done and thought in the every day working world, where the ordinary business of life is carried on, no living creature has ever fully revealed to another. There are reticences in the confessions of the most frank—things which cannot, and therefore never will be spoken.—Doubtless—blessed transcend the limits of language—hopes which the power of no fairy could satisfy—fear which even Lucifer himself would fail to exaggerate. If this portion of our life, which is at least subjected to our own observations cannot be fully and faithfully described, still less can the other portion which defies even our own scrutiny, converts us into mere spectators of ourselves, sets free our actions from the control of our own will, and transforms us into so many passive spokes in the great wheel of destiny. Whatever may be the laws by which it is regulated, sleep presents the counterpart of the waking world—distorted, mutilated, thrown into the irremediable confusion by the force of the imagination.

PARENTS, TAKE HEED!—There are few better investments than that which places before one's family a stock of good books, either of a miscellaneous character or those referring to his own business. Five, ten, twenty five or fifty dollars worth of books put into a boy's hands, will fill his head with ideas,—set him to thinking, and do more towards his future success in life, than a thousand dollars laid up on interest for him. The latter may give him more capital to start on but with a good stock of ideas and a developed mind, he will do far better in life with a much smaller money capital to begin with. "It is the mind that makes the man," and the store of thoughts, and the exercise of the thinking and reasoning powers, are what make the mind. What, for instance, would be the effect upon the great farming and gardening and fruit growing interests of this country, to say nothing of its effect in other directions, if every cultivator had one acre less, and its value laid out on a library of books about his business, would it not frequently keep his boys out of bad company and tend to their redemption? Would it not dignify his calling, in the eyes of his family and of himself, furnish food for thought while engaged in his daily toil, and by the hints and suggestions derived, promote the profit of his labor? The subject is worthy of careful consideration.

A writer in the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph exposes not wisely, but altogether truthfully the hopes which the South founds upon this Convention. "All is not lost," he tells us, "in the estimation of the sword, and when the voice of the sword went against us we lost all, is a false one." Beaten by the sword, they must now resort to other means for securing victory; "the bugle now sounds the rallying cry, and we must give lack the swelling echo—on to Philadelphia." If we failed to take it before, let us take it now. He next assures them that they will be heavily reinforced from the North on their attack on the city. "While we assail it on the South side, a mighty host of our friends is marching upon the city from the North. Philadelphia will be ours; the battle to be fought there the first and most important of the war. When we win the victory we have but to strike the blow and other victories will surely follow, until Washington, too, shall fall into our hands." He then appeals to the "writers of the South and the orators of the sunny land" to "fire the hearts of the faithful to fight and meet the holy sepulchre from the hands of the infidels. All is not lost. We never did submit our cause to the decision of the sword, nor will we ever do so."

The attempt to have Clymer, re-elected, is likely to prove unsuccessful. He stubbornly refuses to lodge a inch, contending that the defeat which awaits him would be easier to bear than the dishonor of backing out at this stage of the campaign. The party managers on the contrary, maintain that the question, in which shall go under the party of Clymer, there is no room for a choice nor time to be lost, and that the gentleman should meet his fate with more resignation. But so far he has been able to be master of the situation. Being regularly nominated, he has the advantage, and the latest advice he was fully determined to use it and maintain his ground.—Pittsburgh Commercial.

General Butler at a social gathering a few evenings since, in referring to the New Orleans massacre, said of Mayor Monroe as a renegade son of Massachusetts, who after being imprisoned by him as a traitor was about to be released upon taking the oath of allegiance, and had actually the pen in his hand to affix his signature when word was brought in that Lincoln had been defeated by the rebels with a loss of forty thousand men. Believing this absurd, Monroe refused to sign, threw down his pen and was taken back to prison, from which he was afterwards released by the action of the authorities at Washington.

An occasional correspondent of the Jackson Citizen tells the following good story: "General Wilcox takes his position, soon as Assessor, vice J. R. Bennett, removed. General Wilcox is very fond of bread and butter, and endorses Andy strongly. District Attorney Russell, who is another bread and butter man, in speaking to Mr. Bennett about his removal, said: 'Oh, Bennett! Andy's cut off your head, has he?' Yes," said J. B., looking the 'my policy' lawyer in the eye, "he cut my head off, but he could not take it round."

The Reading Journal says: Heister Clymer, in his speech in the County Meeting last Tuesday, came out flat-footed in favor of the exploded Calhoun doctrine of State Sovereignty and State independence. His views on this and most other subjects, are identical with those of Jeff. Davis, Lee, Vallandigham & Co.

Gen. Fisk sent recently a corporal and a squad of troops to Jackson county Tenn., to liberate a colored boy, about 16 years old, whom a white man persisted in holding in slavery. This man maintains that since the abolition of the Freedmen's Courts slavery has been restored in Tennessee.

The colored citizens of Memphis have elected thirteen delegates to represent them in the State Convention to be held at Nashville, Aug. 11.
