JUD Evengreens .-- Plant evergreens around your dwellings. Take up healthy trees in the spring or fall, carefully, and set them with regard to rules of transplanting, and they will rarely fail to do well. In removing such trees. care should be had to remove as much dirt with them as possible, and in transporting them be careful that no injury occurs either to the tops or roots. Evergreens have a most splendid appearance during the winter season, and in the summer months they produce a cool and refreshing shade. SOAP SCDS .- Save all the suds from the sink and laundary. If you do not want it for purposes of irrigation, let it be conveyed to your manure heaps or mixed with materials for compost. No article of a liquid nature possesses more powerful alimentary proper. ties, and its economisation will be found a source of considerable profit to any one who will properly use it. It contains the food of plants in a state of solution, and therefore is prepared to act at once and with energy. By mixing it with soda, chip manure, muck, refuse straw, green vegetable matter, or, indeed any kind of decomposed rubbish, and allow the whole to ferment slowly, a most excellent fertilizer for Indian corn may be prepaaed and one that will bring forward the crop with greater vigor than almost any other article that can be named. It is also very valuable as a manure for culmiferous vegetables-m el ons, squashes, cucumbers, &c.

The difference in the amount of products between land that has been thoroughly tilled and that which has only undergone an apology for tillage, must have at times arrested the attention of the most careless reader. Land adequately manured, deeply and finely plowed and properly seeded can alone be reliedon as a source of profit to the cultivator. Yet how few farms around us where these desirable things are carried out to their full and proper extent.

Many farmers will admit that they do not conduct their business as they know it might be done. They undertake more than they can perform properly. Their manure is not applied to the proper crops, and in many ways fully half the labor may be said to be

The garden is that part of the farm where Farmer cultivates his garden deeper and finer than the rest of his premises, and manures it better, scarcely seeming to remember that the field crops require the same depth for free expansion of the roots and the same richness expansion of the roots and the same richness of soil to promote their rapid growth that is required in garden vegetables. Let the farmer examine the extent and depth to which the roots of grain in a loose and favorable soil will spread, and he will cease to wonder at the failure of a crop when the subsoil at the depth of four or five inches is not stirred by the plow, over the hardpan of which the tender fibres of roots vainly wander in search of proper nutriment and fruitlessly strive to penetrate.—Germantown Telegraph.
