In the performance of a duty imposed upon me by the Constitution, I have thus submitted to the representatives of the States and of the people such information of our domestic and foreign affairs as the public interests seem to require. Our Government is now undergoing its most trying ordeal, and my earnest prayer is that the peril may be successfully and finally passed without impairing its original strength and symmetry. The interests of the nation are best to be promoted by the revival of fraternal relations, the complete obliteration of our past differences, and the reinauguration of all the pursuits of peace. Directing our efforts to the early accomplishment of these great ends, let us endeavor to preserve harmony between the co-ordinate preserve harmony between the co ordinate departments of the Government, that each in its proper sphere may cordially co-operate with the other in securing the maintenance of the Constitution, the preservation of the Union, and the perpetuity of our free institu-

WALKS AND TALKS ON THE FARM We need more capital-or rather, perhaps, we need faith enough in good agriculture to use what we have, in improving our farms. Had the millions of dollars which have been sunk in oil wells, been invested in underdrain ing and other improvements, how much bet ter it would have been for the country! Those who complain so loudly of high prices of farm produce, should know that the absorption of capital for speculation is one cause of the present scarcity of the necessaries of life. The farmer needs capital to carry on his business as much as the merchant. But as things now are, it is rare that he gets any accommo dation from the Banks. The necessity of capital among farmers is seen in the fact that at auction sales, where nine months or a year's credit is given, prices go far higher than at cash sales. There are few farmers who have anything like the amount of capital that they could use to advantage. We invest our money in buying the land and have no enough left to farm it properly. One reason of the high position occupied by English and Scotch farmers is, that their means are not locked up in the land. This is owned by the large landlords, while the farmer has all his capital free for active employment. Had he money enough to own the land and farm i too, he would probably feel that he was rich enough "to live without work," and the farm would soon run down. Of course I do not advocate this system of renting farms. It is far better to own them. but it involves the necessity of obtaining more capital for active use. A merchant worth ten thousand dollars would probably borrow, directly or indirectly, twenty thousand in addition to carry on his busi ness. He gives notes at four or six months to these who sell him goods, and takes notes from those to whom he sells and gets them discounted at the bank. And in this way an enterprising merchant sometimes borrows three er four times as much money as his original capital. This is all very well. The business of the country could not be carried on without credit. But how is it with farming? A farmer worth $10,000, which he is not risking in business, seldom uses his credit at all. He is "good," but the banks will not accommodate him, because he requires the confidence enough on the part of farmers themselves to employ money in a better system of agriculture. "But farmers are producers, and should not be under the necssity of borrowing money to carry on their business, like those enga ged in buying and selling." This is true in one sense. But farmers are traders as well as producers. If I raise a litter of pigs, and at weaning time sell them for $2.00 a piece. or if I raise a crop of corn and sell it for $1.00 a bushel, I am so far a producer. I have produced these articles and sold them and got the money. But if instead of selling them I feed out the corn to the pigs, and keep them six months, and then sell them, I am in one sense a trader or a manufacturer. The pigs and the corn are the raw material out of which I manufacture pork and manure. It is for this that I am warranted, on the ordinary principles of business, to borrow money from the bank. If I sell the pigs and the corn to a distiller instead of fattening them on the farm, he borrows money from the bank, and no estions are asked. Look at the thousands of half-fat cattle that are sold in our large who had done the same thing, but with this markets every week. Would it not pay the addition, that when he arrived at the top he farmer to get them in "ripe" condition be- pulled the ladder after him. fore he parts with them? If you few instances of success in this direction, and | can't git good clothes and eddication too, git compromise, which, although evincing increased liberality, has not been accepted by the United States. Peace is now prevailing everywhere in Europe, and the present seems to be a favorable time for an assertion by Congress of the principle, so long maintained by the executive department, that naturalization by one State fully exempts the native born subject of any other State from the performance of military service under any foreign Government, so service under any foreign Government, so long as he does not voluntarily renounce its rights and benefits.

they appear to be more abundant than ever but farmers do not value them as highly as we think they should. For barnyards espe cially they are profitable to haul in. They are obtainable too when there is little pressing work on hand. Gathered up in heaps they can be readily loaded in carts and wagons with close shelvings by using either a cloth ome two or three yards square, or witha wooden rake and the arm. Hogs are very fond of them for litter, so are cows, and for compost they are excellent. As oats straw is now usually fed to cattle and rye straw com mands a high price in the market, there i nothing left for the purpose of littering except wheat straw. Hence forest leaves should b held in higher estimation than they common ly are. - Germantown Telegraph.

CIRARD Life Insurance Company, OF PHILADELPHIA. Capital and Assets Jan 1, 1865, $2,113,174,20

Mutual Insurance Combined with the Se-curity of a Capital. The Girard Life Insurance Company was char-ered in 1826, and is therefore one of the oldest, is well as most substantial companies in the Uni-ced States. It effects insurance for the whole of Life; upon the nonforfeitable or ten year plan, or for any term of years. It also issues Endowment Policies.

Premiums may be paid Yearly, Semi-annually Quarterly.

or Quarterly.

All the insured for whole of life, (including those on the ten year plan,) participate in the profits of the company.

Those insuring never need fear the loss of what they have paid in case they cannot keep up their payments. The company will always commute into a smaller amount, or purchase the policy at an equitable value.

Bonusses or additions to policies are made every five years, without any increase in the premium. Its profits are absolute. Its premiums moderate, Its privileges liberal. It has paid many losses, and has never contested a claim.

For books and circulars, free of charge, 2end to the Home office, No. 408 CHESTNUT St., Phil a. Or to any of its agents.
