HORSE-BREAKING & HORSE-SENSE.

A horse's sense is good common sense. Many a man does not know half so much about some things as a horse, and there is a great difference in horses. The horse is not the best in the service ? Tur time may be very young. He learns very soon what his weapons are-teeth and heels-and in what his security lies-flight. His boldness and "the glory of his nostrils" come when "he rejoic-eth in his strength." With his age comes the knowledge of his powers, and if he has never been mastered—never made to yield to any BISMARK bandles his cards queerly :

will but his own-if he is to be made useful, the struggle must come sooner or later, and man's-will or horse-will must triumph. We think it is best to begin quite young with colts to control them. So we advise to halter a colt while it runs with the mare, and to do it after feeding it carrots and sugar, until it thinks it will get only caressing from mankind, and has no fear of any man. The cold submits easily, because it is the easiest and pleasantest thing he can do, provided he is not frightened, and would as lief be led as to in them. run loose if the curtailment of his freedom in inade up by sweets or carrots. The sense of He always keeps a hack. smell in horses is very acute, and if they are suspicious of anything, they always approach it cautiously and smell of it. They should be indulged in this, and harness, saddle, etc. should all be investigated by the nose as well as by the eye, before a more intimate ac uaintance is forced upon the horse. A horsering of 40 to 50 feet diameter is one of the greatest aids a horse-trainer can have. In this a horse too restive and spirited to take a Well, like a fly in a bowl of milk. lesson may be tired out, so as to be very docile, and a tired horse is much more suscepti-ble to both favors and instruction, than one full of vim, and fire and play. There are a few very simple common sense rules which, if followed, will commend themselves to the horse as well as to the trainer, viz: 1st .--- Always feel kindly toward a horse, no matter what he does to you, and consequently never show "temper." Remember the horse knows instinctively how you feel. 2d .-- Never go near a horse if you are afraid of him, the horse will know it and take advantage of it, before you acknowledge it yourself.

3d .- Never undertake anything with a horse that you do not know you can carry out.

4th-"Make haste slowly," teaching the animal what you want of him, as a child learns its A-B-C's, one letter at a time, being sure that he knows each simple thing before you attempt to teach another; and repeat lessons often.

5th .- Reward each effort to do as you wish, whether he means it or does it accidentally. 6th-Be sure that it is your will and not his that conquers every time.

Following these rules, you may make a horse de almost any thing, if he has not been spoiled before you get him.-American Agriculturist.

A HINT ON IMPROVING AN OLD press.' PLACE. "Be

Once or twice a year we make a visit to a friend who came into possession of an old farm, and who has already made great progress in improving and beautifying it. Like many places of this kind, it was enclosed in a solid, but not very sightly stone wall. The matter of a boundary fence was considered by him in all points of view, and he finally fixed upon and carried out successfully the following: The old wall was allowed to re-main, and close to it, upon the outside, a hedge of Norway spruce was planted. The trees, from a nursery close at hand, were set a year ago, in August. All weeds have been kept closely mowed, the grass has taken a "When men break their hearts, it is the sam foot-hold, and the result is, that from the as when a lobster breaks one of his clawsroadway proper, there is a belt of grass to the hedge, and this has, although set in August, lost scarcely a tree, and has become so dense as to already nearly conceal the wall from view. The whole presents an aspect of finish and elegance, in marked contrast with the slovenly appearance of the opposite side of the road. The spruce hedge is protected from injury by cattle and other causes, by means of a few lengths of galvanized wire means of a tew lengths of galvalined with stretched to temporary posts.
