THE TRIBUNE FOR 1867.

The Tribune enters upon the year 1867 more prosperous in business than ever before. The expediency of enlarging our pages—thus making the Tribune the largest and the cheapest newspaper in America—was doubted by many. We have found our account in it. The circulation of The Tribune is steadily increasing, and our advertising patronage has increased so much that it is more difficult to print our news than when we used a smaller sheet, and this difficulty we can only meet by frequently publishing supplementary pages.

money, and to organize it we have invested many thousands of dollars. When we state that there are three hundred people directly or indirectly connected with the editorial department of the Tribune, charged, in a greater or lesser degree, with writing for itse columns and giving it news, and that for every item of news we pay money, the vast expense of our publication may be imagined. We intend to enlarge these facilities, and not only to gather news from all parts of the world, but to ask the most gifted men of other countries to write for our columns. With many of them we have already entered into negotiations which will result in giving to the readers of The Tribune a series of essays that, both for their intrinsic value and the fame of their illustrious authors, will long be memorable in the history of journalism. We postpone for the present a more definite announcement.
