

Farm, Garden & Household.

SHOULD FARMERS BE EDUCATED FOR FARMING?

The intelligent reader may exhibit certain doubts, because the question is absurd to him: he knows that every profession should be educated; that no man, no matter how great his natural abilities, can successfully prosecute a business without thoroughly learning its rudiments; that no one, without possessing the principles, then pursuing it with constant research and diligent application. Yet if he goes into the country, to any farming community, and asks the average of the neighborhood the simplest question in agricultural chemistry, vegetable physiology, scientific husbandry or animal physiology, the chances are that he will receive crude, inaccurate or very indefinite information.

If a man "put out his shingle" as an attorney or counsellor at law, without legal education or acquirements, we should not be averse to consulting him relative to any great question of law, involving titles to property; the absolute rights of individuals; of titles by succession, marriage or judgment; of executorial contracts, or anything in relation to deeds, wills or testaments. If a fellow, itching for money or notoriety, offers his services to be employed as a physician, without studying medicæ rationes, we would avoid him unless we wished to meet that "lean fellow who beats all conquerors"—wished to close "life's futile journey" and journey to that "land" from whence "no traveler returns." Such characters we denounce as charlatans, quacks and impostors, and advise all our friends to avoid them.

What material difference, in qualification, is there between the dull, uneducated agriculturist, and the pseudo, spurious disciple of Blackstone? or the false, counterfeit follower of Galen? We can see none. The ignorant farmer may be honest, industrious and a good member of society; but he is laboring in the dark; is attempting to cultivate the soil without knowing anything of geological origin, of organic chemistry, of vegetable physiology, the agencies of heat, light, electricity, the food of plants, and other things of that kind.

And yet he expects to thrive, increase his domain and lay up something for the evening of life. Plodding along, without knowing the rudiments of his occupation, without scientific training, without applying the fundamental principles of progress, he finds agriculture an "up hill business."

If the farmers of this country were as intelligent as they might be using science as an aid, understanding the relation of the plant to its resources of nourishment; what is necessary to make all soils fertile; what chemical properties are essential to crops, with all labor sharpened with observation and experience, they would become the wealthiest class of the country—the lords of the soil—the true chivalry of our glorious empire of agriculture. But we shall never see all our farmers thus intelligent—most of them will remain fossils—but those who have a taste for improved husbandry, scientific cultivation of the soil, and who never weary of progress, we say GO AHEAD! You will reap the fruits of your intelligence, add to the aggregate of national prosperity, and leave memories written indelibly in the golden harvests of your homesteads.—Farm and Fireside.

MULCHING FRUIT TREES.
Fruit trees and sometimes ornamental trees are sited with backyard manner; some with straw, old hay, salt hay, wood shavings from planing mills, and saw-dust from saw-mills; and in some instances tan-bark is employed as a mulch. Under certain circumstances there is nothing better for a mulch than a dressing of mellow earth spread on the ground around the growing tree to the depth of three or four inches, so as to cover the entire ground as far as the branches extend in every direction. If the land is producing grass around the trees, a dressing of mellow earth will smother most of the vegetation, and thus keep the soil moist and lively during the entire growing season, especially if the mulch be made once every two weeks. When such mellow earth is spread on certain kinds of grass, numerous tender spears of grass will spring up through the mulch; but by the use of a sharp scuffle-hoe a few minutes around each tree thus mulched, the grass can be kept down during the entire season with but little labor. Barnyard manure, coarse straw and shavings are sometimes objectionable around trees growing in a lawn; but mellow earth always makes a clean and satisfactory mulch for any kind of trees or bushes. There are instances on record in which bearing apple trees were mulched with nothing but mellow earth spread around the trees a few inches in depth, and the result was a bountiful crop of smooth fruit. Raspberry bushes frequently suffer extremely for lack of a supply of moisture. This is especially the case when a grassy turf is allowed to grow around the bushes. But if the ground be mulched with any material that will keep down weeds and grass, if the soil be in a fair state of fertility, the bushes seldom fail to bear a bountiful crop of delicious fruit. When there is but little vegetable matter in the soil a dressing of manure, covered with rich barnyard manure, will prove about the best material that can be employed for mulching plants of any kind. In the vicinity of the sea-shore sedge and salt hay are employed with excellent satisfaction, for mulching all kinds of trees and bushes.

A few days ago, a young and pretty girl stepped into a shop, where a spruce young man, who had long been enamored of her, but dared not speak, stood behind the counter selling draperies. In order to remain as long as possible, she cheapened everything. At last she said: "I believe you think I am cheating you." "Oh, no," said the youngster, "to me you are always fair."
"Well," whispered the lady, blushing, as she laid an emphasis on the word—"I would not stay here so long bargaining, if you were not so dear."

"And you have been married, Patrick, three times, haven't you?"
"Yes, indeed, you."

"And what do you say of it? Which wife did you like best?"
"Well, Becky O'Brine, that I married the first time; was a good woman—too good for me; she got sick and died, and the Lord took her. Then I got married to Bridget Flanagan. She was a bad woman; and she got sick and died too—and the devil took her. Then, fool that I was, I got married to Margaret Haggerty. She was worse, bad—very bad; so bad that neither the Lord nor the devil would have her, so I have to keep her myself."

Humorous.

REPARATION belongs to God.

CORNING was once asked which of Wadsworth's works he considered the prettiest, when he promptly replied—"His daughter Dora."

At a meeting of unmarried printers, not long since, the following toast was drunk in silence: Woman—Heaven reward her, she is always in favor of a well-conducted press.

A VERDOP, of a magnetic character, that would be drawn to the bottom of any iron vessel that was passing, is talked of. It would be a very attractive arrangement.

A MAN who was hit by a snow-storm from a five-story roof wishes it had been "Announced by all the trumpets of the sky" that the storm was coming.

In a New Jersey village, a plain stone over the grave of a young woman has this inscription: "Julia Adams, died of thin shoes, April 17, 1838, aged eighteen."

A MATRON chop, in boarding house parlance, means a piece of the bone of a sheep, from which the mutton has all been chooped.

"PADDY, why don't you get your ears cropped?" they are entirely too long for a man."
"And yours," replied Pat, "ought to be lath-and-plaster—these are too short for a mule."

An editor thus indulges his delinquent subscriber: "We don't want money desperately bad; but our creditors do, and they no doubt owe you. If you pay us, we'll pay them, and they'll pay you."

"MADAM, your boy cannot pass at half fare, he is too large," said the conductor of a railway train, which had been long detained on the road by snow. "He may be too large now," replied the matron, "but he was small enough when we started." The conductor subsided.

JUDGE—who is a very able Judge of the Supreme Court of one of the great States of this Union, when he first came to the bar, was a very blundering speaker. On one occasion, when he was pleading a case of replevin, involving the right of property to a lot of hogs, he addressed the jury as follows: "Gentlemen of the jury, there were just twenty-four hogs, gentlemen—exactly twice as many as there are in that jury box!" The effect can be imagined.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer relates the following: "A lady of this city, in giving directions to a new servant the other evening, said:—'Now, Biddy, as soon as you have got breakfast ready to-morrow morning, you must ring the bell.' "Shure an' I'll do it mum," said Biddy."

At an unusually early hour the next morning there came a beautiful tug as the GOOF bell—a tug that almost broke the wire and sent both husband and wife into an upright position in bed. The ringing continued with frightful energy. Master of the house pulled on his pants, and without waiting for slippers or dressing gown, hurried in surprise to the door. There stood buried upon the door step with a countenance radiant in the consciousness of a faithfully discharged duty, and with a low courtesy exclaimed: "Breakfast is ready, sar."

SAM—, a colored man, residing somewhere in Bedford street, by good luck, received a fine start in the world, and soon acquired a handsome property. When he had reached middle life a friend asked him one day why he did not marry, as a man in his circumstances was abundantly able to support a wife.

"Oh, I consider myself too good to marry a nigger wench," returned Sam, with a feint to turn up his fat nose.
"Marry a white woman then," continued his friend, "the law allows it, I think."
"It'll be mean enough if I'd have a white woman that was hanged for to marry a nigger," replied Sam, with a loud guffaw.
