ANOTHER RAILWAY SCHEME.

If by any fortuitous circumstances, all the railroads that have been projected, on paper, over this route, now doubly and trebly occupied, should be built, he that lives to see the day will enjoy a rare treat. In truth we do not know all the charters that and setting free the original fomentors and body is, manifestly, under the impression that here is a valuable route and that a rail-road should forthwith be built, but when the "nins" are nut down there are a thous the "pins" are put down there are a thousand little obstacles, set up by other parties, ple can only see in it a most humiliating to be overcome, which embarrass the enter- and disgraceful failure on the part of the prise, and we, poor unfortunates, along the government to vindicate justice, and punish grand route, are left high and dry, the mere individual ambition.

THE COMING CAMPAIGN.

Address of the National Union Committee

New York, May 16.

To the Republicans of the Union:
The National Union Committee appeals to the Republicans of the country for their assistance and co-operation in this auspicious to the Republicans of the country for their assistance and co-operation in this auspicious crisis of our country.

We deem it of the highest importance that the Republicans of every State should immediately reorganize for the remaining elections of 1867, preparatory to the coming Presidential contest. Especially should this organization be immediately effected in those States which have never before recognized as the only just basis of government the equal rights of man. Not a day should be lost in forming and strengthening within those States a public sentiment in consonance with the principles which underlie the great political organization to which we belong. To this end we desire to prosecute a systematic and thorough canvass of the Southern States, by the most fliccient speakers of both races. We would second their efforts by a distribution of documents, enforcing the printiples policy and aims of the Republican party. We would call in every locality where it is possible, meetings for discussion where those who are with us in principle may learn to act with unity and energy. These measures are required to bring out the vote of the large body of Republican Unionists who now render the Southern States a battle field of principles. It is the pressing need of the hour that bold judicious and able men, thoroughly imbued with our creed should there explain our principles, establish our faithfulness to them, and prove depend upon the permanent triumph of our cause.

Beyond this it is most essential that we should now establish in these States, Free Thought, Free Speech, and a Free Press. Every part of this Republic must be open to the discussion of principles and measures. This must be sustained, as a cardinal point in our creed, at all and every hazard. Efforts to intimidate the humble and ignorant voter on the part of the Southern planter, must be met with the spirit of freemen, and the determination which a just cause sanctions.

In times past the Republican party has struggled against the unjust reproach of being sectional in its aims and character, though its purpose and the means of effecting them were such as the fathers of the Republic approved. It was accused of being governed by selfish motives, and of desiring to aggrandize the North at the expense of the South. Its adversaries having the power to silence and to crush all opposition, denied all discussion, and overawed even freedom of thought in fifteen States of the Union. It is therefore, now an imperative rendering this overthrow secure and final, has happily vindicated our course and or-ganization: but it is necessary to stamp the conviction of our loyality and fidelity to the conviction of our loyality and fidelity to the right, irrespective of section or race, upon the reconstructed States. For the first time in many years the enthusiastic followers of our flag, and confessors of our faith, are there taking part in the popular gatherings, and in many of the Southern States, we have reason to believe that they form a decided majority. They are, however, without organization, and lack the cohesion and discipline necessary to success. Three fourths of its members have never voted, and have no political knowledge of the means whereby the popular will is expressed. With many of them the habit is fixed, of rendering implicit obedience to able and dexterous politicians, who are implacably hostile to our principles, and determined on the prostration of our cause.

Hold troops in readiness to suppress a riot, if necessary, keeping the Custom House as your base of operations, and if necessary call on the naval commander to place his ships opposite the foot of canal street. The foregoing instructions are to be carried out on the supposition that trouble in the city is anticipated."

General Mower addressed the rioters yes

General Mower addressed the rioters yesterday, when two hundred passed his head-quarters on their way to the new basin, brandishing clubs and threatening to lynch the centracters there, as follows:

"If you feel yourselves wronged you must apply to the proper authorities for redress, and you shall have it; but if you take this thing into your own hands you may lose what rights you already possess. If you go on with this rioting, by the Eternal God I will throw grape and canister into you. Now disperse and go to your homes or to your work."

The mob immediately dispersed.

There was a small affair of a like character to day, being an attempt on the part of the mob to prevent others from working. The police made several arrests.

The military was reviewed to day and a gunboat has been ordered in front of the city. All is quiet.

. JEFF. DAVIS.

The Trial of the Ex-Rebel Chief—Scenes in the Court-room—The Rebel Yell again—A Melo-Dramatic affair.
RICHMOND, May 13.—The title of one of Wendell Phillips' best lectures, "The South Triumphant," is no longer an idea of fancy. It had a most remarkable illustration in the United States Circuit Court here to-day. The shouts that went up from the Rebels when Judge Underwood ordered the United States marshal to discharge the prisoner was readily recognized by the "Boys in Blue" as the old rebel yell, heard on a hundred battle-fields of the rebellion. The scene on the streets, from the court-room to the Spottswood Hotel, after the release of Davis, was certainly no less enthusiastic than spottswood Hotel, after the release of Barvis, was certainly no less enthusiastic than the scene in Paris when Napoleon Bonaparte returned from Elba. The smouldering fires of the rebellion seemed to be rekindled, and "The Lost Cause" gathered new hopes and of the rebellion seemed to be rekindled, and "The Lost Cause" gathered new hopes and fresh courage.

I have already telegraphed you the whole proceeding in bringing Davis here, and in his trial, which has been of the melo-dramatic order. The last act of the rebellion was played in the court-room to-day, with all the seeme and stage effects of the theatre. I need not say that Davis was the star, and that he played his part perfectly.

The court-room was opened about nine o'clock. The newspaper men were admitted first, then the members of the bar, and finally the "Great Unwashed." The audience sat for about ladf an hour waiting for the play to begin.

Horace Greeley, Augustus Schell, William M. Evarts, William B. Reed, Charles O'Conner, rebel Gen. Imboden, Fitz Hugh Lee, with John Mitchel, Patrick Henry Aylett, Judge Lyons, Dr. Maddox, who shot a Union soldier in Alexandria last year; Rev. Dr. Minnegerode, Jeff Davis spiritual adviser, and other prominent rebels, entered with due form and ceremony, and occupied what might be termed the orchestra chairs. Then came General Schofield and some members of his staff. Finally, the great star actor, accompanied by General Burton and Surgeon Cooper, appeared. Here there was a marked sensation. A feeling of absolute reverence seized the rebels, and curiosity the Unionists, so that everything for a second was still as death.

Davis looked well, though troubled with death.

Dayis looked well, though troubled with slight cough. After the play had commenced, Dayis was escorted from the prisoners' dock to a seat between Charles O'Conner and William B. Reed, which he could daying the performance.

The return to the writ of habeas corpus occasioned some little parley between the counsel. After a sort of prologue from Wm. B. Evarts and District Attorney Chandler the trial of the distinguished prisoner research code.

dler the trial of the distinguished prisoner was in order.

The intervening scenes, however, were not without their due effect and importance. When Judge Underwood agreed to admit Davis to bail, Charles O'Conner commenced to call the names of bailsmen. The first was Horace Greeley, who stepped up to the clerk's desk with a smiling face, amid the silent admiration of the rebels present. Then followed the names of John Minor Botts and others. After the bail bond was signed. Davis commenced to hold a levee in open court. Greeley, Botts, and other friends stepped up and congratulating him, and engaged in what was evidently an agreeable conversation. Davis smiled all over; a grim, ghastly smile, which seemed to say, "I have conquered at last."

As soon as Judge Underwood announced that the prisoner was discharged, Davis left the court room and proceeded to his carriage. As he emerged from the building the air was rent with cheers upon cheers, and the rebels stood with uncovered heads. The United States troops who were on guard along the square looked ineffably mean. I am sure they felt ashamed of themselves, or of the Government they represented. Davis was driven rapidly to his hotel, the crowd following his carriage and cheering wildly all the time. As he neared the Spottswood Hotel Mrs. Davis and other ladies in her rooms waved their handkerchiefs from the windows. Everything was ladies in her rooms waved their handker-chiefs from the windows. Everything was in a state of excitement, and it seemed as if the return from Montgomery in 1861 was
