THINNING OUT FRUIT.

It may be considered somewhat early to make suggestions on the subject of thinning out fruit, but it can never be too early to give good advice, and we think that as pear and peach trees are beginning to show their product, the thinning out process may be begun at almost any time.

It is true the operation can be performed conveniently only upon such trees as are not over large. But it should be especially attended to in young trees, which frequently over-bear, to the great injury of the health of the trees, as well as the quality of the fruit. To obtain the finest specimens of fruit, they should not be allowed to grow in clusters or in contact with each other, and all that exhibited the least imperfection should be removed. What is lost in number will be doubly made up in size and flavor. This should be remembered. Many persons regard the thinning out of peaches, pears, and apples as so much loss but they are not judges of fruit, and have no knowledge of its proper culture. They want as large a crop as possible, letting the quality take care of itself, no matter how much the tree is damaged and what effect it may have on the following year's crop.

On some of our old pear trees last year we removed three-fourths of the entire crop, and afterwards found the tree to contain more than was advisable.

It goes hard with some people to diminish the quantity of fruit upon their trees. Some times they plead want of time; but this is not admissible, for if they have not time to attend to the proper cultivation of fruit they should abandon it altogether. The real cause is their greediness. You can't make them believe that they are the gainers by destroying a portion of the crop, saying that nature is the best judge as to the quantity of the fruit. Such persons have no practical knowledge of fruit-raising, and the sooner they give it up the better it will be for them, their pockets and reputation.—Germantown Telegraph.

SODS AND WEEDS.

It should be a general practice with farmers to gather up all the sods, weeds, and even the year's growth of briars, bushes, &c., and stack them in large compact heaps, where they remain for from one to two years, or until they become properly decomposed, and broken up into one mass. It would take but little time to gather these, while in doing so the fields would be cleared of trash, which, if left to remain, obstruct the growth of plants and encourage the increase of those drawbacks to growing crops. The "manure" which ought to be produced on a farm of an hundred acres by this process, would hardly be believed in until properly put in operation. But we can say in advance that there ought to be realized, at the lowest calculation, one cart load per acre. This substance is extremely valuable for gardens, and especially for corn, as well as for soils of a heavy and tenacious character.

We have long been convinced that this part of a farmer's business has not nearly been so generally attended to as it ought to be. In the pursuit of agriculture there are as negligent and indifferent farmers as other business men. Some, indeed, appear to have no desire to succeed, or to make more than a mere hand-to-mouth living; they never learn anything from the experience and example of those more energetic and thriving neighbors. They know enough, and hence are content to handrum their lives away, leaving their children to pattern after them, unless they possess superior innate faculties of their own, and copy, in spite of the example of their parents, after those who have kept pace with the spirit of the age.

In passing through agricultural districts the observant person sees many different phases of farming. He constantly notices where the eye and hand of the intelligent, attentive and successful farmer belong. He requires no guide to point out to him where the soil as well as the mind has been improved. He sees no failure of crops there unless through the visitation of agencies over which man has no control. Even severe drought has little effect upon his crops. Judicious manuring and thorough tillage and draining alone work these agricultural wonders. Who, then, who possesses the true spirit of the farmer, will not go and do likewise.—Germantown Telegraph.

GOOD EFFECTS OF LIME.

If any one has any doubts as to the good effects of lime on any soil, let him try for experiment half an acre, lime it well, and we think that in four or five years he will extend the application; once well done and it will last an age. Who ever saw the spot where the ruins of a house once was but has seen the rich, strong grass at all seasons, wet or dry? Now what produces this? The fertility that gathers around the residence of them. It must be the lime that falls into the soil from the bricks and plastering. Lime acts more positively upon some soils than others, but did you ever know of limestone land that was not fertile? That did not give a larger yield of grass? It seems to act as manure or food for plants—for all who are conversant with chemical analysis know there is a small portion of lime or alkaline matter found in all plants, grasses or trees. Lime supplies this—hence the vigorous growth wherever found—it is much more advantageous to double the produce of one acre than to work two acres for the same returns. Let us try the article; if we see no marked effects the first year and but little the second, doubt not; for it requires time to get this material under way. But when it does act its operations are steady and durable, and annually returns the cost of application. Do not fear a little risk, for it is an old and tried saying, "nothing like, nothing have." Most farms are lacking in lime, and till that is given crops must be small.—Germantown Telegraph.

Humorous.

You may safely mind other people's business. They will be sure to mind yours.

A COMPANY of soldiers were marching through a bog in Ireland, when the sergeant ordered them to form "two deep." One fellow, an Irishman, who got up to his thighs in a bog hole, exclaimed, "Bedad, I'm in too deep already."

A NOBLEMAN asked a clergyman once at his table, "why the goose, if there was one, was always placed next to the parson?" "Really, said he, 'I can give no reason for it; but your question is so odd that I shall never see a goose in the future, without thinking of your lordship.'"

"Pray, excuse a bit of sarcasm," said Smith to Jones, "but you are an infamous liar and second-rate."

"Pray, pardon a touch of irony," replied Jones, as he knocked him down with the poker.

A WITTY editor who has just failed, says he did it with all the honors of war, and retired from the field with colors flying—Sheriff's flag fluttering from two windows and the door, and a white flag hung out from his person in token of surrender.

"Is it possible, Miss, that you don't know the names of some of your best friends?" inquired a gentleman of a lady.

"Certainly," she replied, "I don't know what my own may be a year hence."

A COLONEL of volunteers repeatedly insisted as a condition of his offer of service, "Mind, we are not to go out of the country, Mr. Pitt! we are not to go out of the country."

"Except, I suppose," said the minister, coldly, "in the case of a fatal invasion."

WIGGINS was one day with a friend, when he observed a poor dog that had been killed, lying in the gutter. Wiggins paused, gazed at the dead animal, and at last said: "Here is another shipwreck."

"Shipwreck, where?"

"Why here's a bark that's lost forever." His companion growled and passed on.

A SERGEANT contraband down South, was lately suspended a horse's power in operation, when he broke out thus:—

"Mister, I have seen heaps of things in my life, but I never saw anything where a horse could do his own work and ride himself too."

An old miser, who was notorious for selfishness, was one day asked why he was so thin.

"I do not know," said the miser, "I have tried various means for getting fatter, but without success."

"Have you tried virtuous?" inquired his friend.

A SCHOLAR, a bald man, and a barber who were travelling together, agreed each to watch four hours at night, in turn, for the sake of security. The barber's lot came first, who shaved the scholar's head when asleep, then waked him when his turn came. The scholar scratching his head, and feeling it bald, exclaimed: "You wretch of a barber, you have waked the bald man instead of me."

A LADY in Nashville, on mercy bent, was making a visit to the penitentiary, and was permitted to look through the various wards. In one room she saw three women engaged in sewing, and turning to the keeper, who was showing her about, said to him in an under tone:

"Dear me! the vicious-looking women I ever saw in my life! What are they put here for?"

"Here they are," he replied, "because I am here; they are my wife and daughters, madam."

But the madam was travelling out as fast as possible.

A TEXAS party tells of a young couple who eloped on horseback accompanied by a clergyman who was to marry them. The lady's father gave chase, and was over taking the party when the maiden called out to her clerical friend.

"Can you marry us as we run?" The idea took and he commenced the ritual, and just as the bride's father clutched her bride rail, the clergyman pronounced the lovers man and wife. The father was so pleased with the dashing action that, as the story goes, he gave them his blessing.

THE HEAD TURNED ROUND.—A crazy man was found at a grindstone sharpening a large butcher knife, and now and then examining the edge to see if it was keen.

"What are you doing here?"

"Don't you see? sharpening this big knife."

"Yes, but what are you going to do with it when sharpened?"

"Cut old Ben Brown's head off, to be sure."

"What will you kill him, will you?"

"Oh, no! I only cut his head off and stick it right on again, hind side before, just to let the old fellow look back on his past life! It would take him all the rest of his life to review it."

The Girard Life Insurance Company was chartered in 1826, and is therefore one of the oldest, as well as most substantial companies in the whole of Life upon the nonforfeitable or ten year plan, or for any term of years. It also issues Endowment Policies. Premiums may be paid Yearly, Semi-annually or Quarterly.

All the interest for whole life, (including those on the ten year plan), participate in the profits of the company. Those insuring in the Girard may always rest assured that their best interests will be protected. All whole life Policies of several years standing are purchased by the company, or they are commuted into a policy for a smaller amount, without any loss of money to pay—therefore the insured need not be in haste in case they are not able after several years payments, to keep up their policies.

Business or additions to policies are voided every year, without any loss to the insured. Its profits are absolute. Its provisions moderate. Its policies liberal. It has paid many losses, and has never defaulted a claim. For books and circulars, free of charge, send to the Home office, No. 408 CHESTNUT ST., Phila. Or to any of its agents.
