CELERY.

setting the plants in deep trenches,-involving much labor for digging the trenches and subsequent earthing up.

dwarf varieties are most profitable, and for winter use should be transplanted from the middle of July to the middle of August, as nothing is gained by attempting to grow it in the hot days of early summer.

We may use the ground from which a spring crop of beets, onions or peas has been removed, and if the ground has been well manured for these crops. the Celery will need no additional application of fertilizing matter. Lines are struck out on the level surface three feet apart, and the plants set six inches apart in the rows,-pressing the soil firmly about the roots to exclude the air until new rootlets are formed. As soon as the plants are fairly started, say about the middle of August, the earth is drawn closely about them with the hoe, and then pressed closely around each plant with the hands,—firm enough to keep the leaves in an upright position and prevent them from spreading. This is termed "handling." The banking process is then finished with the spade,—digging the soil from between the rows and banking it up clear to the top on each side of the row of the Celery.

If we wish the Celery entirely for winter use, no "banking up" with the spade is need ed, and nothing beyond the "handling,"-which in this case should not be done before the middle of September, or just long enough before the Celery is dug up to keep it in an upright position.

Celery will stand all the frost we have in this climate up to about the middle of November. The crop should be dug from the first to the middle of November. Select the dry-est ground. Dig a trench as narrow as possible, (10 or 12 inches,) and in depth just the height of the Celery. The Celery is put in as nearly perpendicular as possible, and so as to fill it up entirely, -its green tops being on a level with the top of the ground. No earth is put to the roots other than what may ad-here to the plants in taking them up. There is always moisture enough at the bottom of the trench, at the cool season, to keep the plant from wilting.

Cover gradually with some light manur of straw and leaves, increasing gradually un-til about the last of December, when it will require at least a foot of covering of some light dry material.

The reason that it cannot bear the full cov ering at first is that the heat generated from the closely packed Celery could not pass off, and decay to some extent takes place. -M. S A. in Burk and Schugkill Journal.

IMPROVE THE HOMESTEAD.

The first thing I should press on the farm ers, in the way of improvements, would be what we might call roadside improvement. Keep the cattle off the highways, keep the weeds cut close, and lines of shade trees or each side-this, with neat fences, will be an evidence of civilization to begin with. Then I would enjoin the removal from the roadside near the dwelling, of all dilapidated and bro-ken implemints, which are so apt, somehow or other, to accumulate.

The barn and other out-buildings are very frequently located more on the principle onvenience than good taste, but we must take these things as they are, and improve them with paint or wash of some sort, and a good thick belt of rapid growing trees around them, both for shelter and shade, and to partly conceal their unsightly appearance.

Then, as for the door yard, I would dig up, root out all the old neglected plum, peach, cherry and quince trees, that seem to have sprung up by chance in the fence corners. All the finer fruits, I would form into a nice fruit garden of half an acre to two acres, as might be necessary. There I would have complete collection of pears, cherries, apricots, plums, quinces, all the small fruits systematically planted and carefully cultivated. This garden might be made one of the most nteresting portions of the premises, to say nothing of the abundant supply of fine fruit and vegetables it would yield. Here the "Mother," said Freddy's voice under

Then the ground about the house I would convert into a smooth lawn, which must be kept cut close all summer. This lawn must be suitably embellished with deciduous and evergreen trees, flowering shrubs, roses, &c. This is the way I preach to the farmers when I visit them, but only once in a great while with any effect. It is a shame for our wellto-do farmers that they are so behind in this matter. It makes farm life so dull and dreary a pursuit, that I am not surprised to see all the brighter boys run away from it, and our rural population, growing less and less every year. Then think how much these improvements would add to the market value of the farms. A nice house, some good fences, an orchard, increase the value of a farm from $20 to $25 per acre, other things being equal, but carry out such suggestions as I have made and what do you suppose it would add to the value of a farm? Almost double it! This argument has some weight; it touches the pocket, but the moral effect of ents would be absolutely incalculable.-P. Barry.

WASH FOR TREES .- It is probably a little late to wash trees with a view to the destruc tion of insects, yet it is never too late to do good, and washing the trunks of trees with a proper mixture will not only kill insects but t will add greatly to the health of the tree. For a wash we have already recommended whale oil soap, which we have found to be an excellent application, seeming to combine all the ingredients distasteful to insect life. Re cently petroleum and common soft soap, in the proportion of a pint of the former to a allon and a half of the latter, is considerably used. We have no doubt this will answer and it is in some respects similar to the oth er. We also see recommended the old application made of sulphur, tobacco and lime. mixed with water, but we like the other better. A scraping and scrubbing of the trunks of trees, say twice a year, will exercise a wonderful influence upon the health and productiveness of the trees.—German-

STIR THE SOIL .- If you expect to gather good fruit, or large and fragrant flowers keep the soil frequently stirred; never let is get packed down and dried. If drought comes, the more you stir the land the better. Soil stirred after four o'clock p. m. will absorb the dew almost equal to the effect of a small shower. Many years ago, we kept a large nursery fresh, green and growing all summer by keeping our plow and cultivator working from three p. m. to dark, and somegardeners for growing celery, possesses many advantages over the customary method of setting the plants in decrease. grew on as usual, and all by means of constant stirring of the soil .- Rural N. per annum The Girard Life Insurance Company was char-tered in 1826, and is therefore one of the oldest, as well as most substantial companies in the Uni-ted States. It effects insurance for the whole of Life; upon the nonforfoitable or ten year plan, or for any term of years. It also issues Endowment Policies. Policies.

Premiums may be paid Yearly, Semi-annually or Quarterly. or Quarterly.

All the insured for whole of life, (including those on the ten year plan,) participate in the profits of the company.

Those insuring in the Girard may always rest assured that their best interests will be protected. All whole of Life Policies of several years standing, are purchasable by the company, or may be commuted into a policy for a smaller amount, without any thing more to pay—therefore the insured need not fear a loss in case they are not able, after several years payments, to keep up their policies.

To enable those who may have claims upon the United States for moneys due deceased officers and soldiers on account of military services rendered, while in the regular or volunteer service, we publish the following order of payment:

First.—If the deceased was Married, payment will be made: 1st, to the widow; 2d, if no widow, to his child or children (if minors, to a guasdian.) Szconn.—If he died unmarried: 1st, to the father; 2d, if the father is dead, to the mother; 3d, if both parents are dead, to the brothers and sisters, collectively; lastly, to the heirs general (to be distributed in accordance with the laws of the State in which the deceased had his domicile.)

In the number entitled to Bounty may be added the pro rata Bounty due soldiers discharged for wounds received in actual battle.

It operates on the secretions and fills the glands with new life and coloring matter. Thin, dead, faded or gray hair will always be brought back by a few applications, to its youthful abundance, vitality and color.

It makes the hair soft, glossy, fragrant, pleasant to the touch and easy to arrange. Dry, wiry and intractable locks become moist, pliant and disposed to remain in any desired position. As a Hair Dressing it has no equal. The sales are enormous and it is a universal favorite with old and young of both sexes.
