THE SILENTLY FALLING SNOW.

In flakes of a feathery white,
'Tis falling so gently and slow;
Oh, pleasant to me is the sight,
When silently falling the snow,
Snow, snow, snow,
When silently falling the snow.

The earth is all covered to-day
With mantle of radiant show;
It sparkles and shines in the ray,
In crystals of glittering snow,
Snow, snow, snow,
In crystals of glittering snow.

Oh, happy the snow-birds I see,
While hopping and flittering they go;
They tell of a lesson to me,
While feeding in beautiful snow,
Snow, snow, snow,
While feeding in beautiful snow.

The trees have a burden of white, The trees have a burden of white,
It covers their branches, I know,
It never forsakes them by night,
All day are they playing with snew.
Snow, snow,
All day are they playing with snew.

THE KITCHEN GARDEN.

It is well khown to our readers that for many years we have given them line upon line and precept upon precept on the necessity of pro-viding for each family a good-sized spot of ground, well fenced in, for a kitchen garden. There never should be less than half an acre, which every desirable, substantial vegetable it is their inferring D. 1. "No, madem should be cultivated.

It has been a too common oversight of farmers to neglect the garden. From the eighth to the sixteenth of an acre is usually set apart, which contains a few currant and gooseberry bushes, perhaps a pear tree or two, a hop vine, a lilac bush, &c., and the season's crop, a few onions, beets, parsnips, a small bed of lettuce, eaten in the plant when grown a few inches high, instead of begreen, cabbage only for fall and winter use, &c. The worst of it is, usually but a single planting of each is made, affording only momentary supply, followed by an intermission of fifty weeks in every year.

We contend that the half acre or acre which is the most valuable portion of the whole plantation : and that it will afford more profit and comfort than any other space of the same

There should be in this garden every good vegetable, and there should be a succession of crops of all the most desirable kinds, from the beginning to the end of the season. It should small fruits.

If the regular farm force should not be then the wives and daughters can do the sowing, planting, weeding, &c., and will always take care to make the best use of the ground. The farmer, if anybody, should enjoy the fruits of the soil in their perfection—and we in this respect, will turn over a new leaf .-Germantown Telegraph.

PLANTING CUTTINGS.

We are constantly hearing people say that wheresoever we may-"A thing that is worth of condolence to her." doing at all is worth doing well."

There should be properly two eyes to every cutting; then dig a trench—set the cuttings at an angle of 45 degrees (at least six inches above the ground—and press the earth around the wood firmly with the foot. It is well to mulch them with grass or straw, and if need be water them occasionally in the dryest weather. This is of course for the farmer and amateur. The nurseryman propagates from a single eye, stuck together as closely as possible.

Some varieties of the grape are propagated much more freely than others. good portion of wood is used.

berries are thus grown. We have had both eyes beneath the surface of the ground; if a sengers, who for the time forgot their dar bush, let the eyes remain. These cuttings | ger. ought to be planted at least eight inches deep and the earth pressed firmly around them.
