Radishes always do better when planted in new ground, or at least ground where they have not heretofore been. Old gardens are the worst places in the world for radishes. You will rarely obtain any sound ones. Clay mixed with the old soil vitilizes it greatly and will produce good radishes.

Tomatoes, Egg and Cabbage plants, after being set out, generally become somewhat wilted in their leaves, and lose some of them from the effects of the sun before they become established. This can be prevented by setting over the plant, say from eight or nine to four or five o'clock in the day, boxes in the shape of cones about fourteen inches in height, open at the top. If shrubbery or fruit trees transplanted this season look sickly or backward in growing, prune them sharply. It is the only way to save them, their setting out and other thiags being duly attended to.

All Raspberry and Blackberry canes set out this spring should be cut down to within six inches of the ground, if not done when set out. It will ensure the growth of the new wood, and they will come into fine bearing order next year; whereas, should the canes be allowed to remain only partially pruned, as other bearing wood, there may be a small crop of poor fruit, and only about half a crop next year. Some people are so eager to get fruit at once that they totally neglect this advice.
