Poetry.

THE WANTS OF MAN.

"Man wants but little here below,

Not wants that little long."

"Tis not with me exactly so;

But 'tis so in the song.

My wants are many, and if told

Would muster many a score.

And were each wish a unit of gold

I still should long for more.

What first I want is daily bread—

And canvas-backs—and wine—

And all the realms of nature spread

Before me, when I dine.

Four courses scarcely can provide

My appetite to quell;

With four choice coqs from France beside,

To dress my dinner well.

What next I want—at princely cost—

Is elegant attire;

Black silk furs for winter's frost,

And silks for summer's heat,

And cashmere shawls, and Brussels lace

And bonnets' fronts to grace

And diamond rings, my hands to grace

And rubies for my neck.

I want (who does not want?) a wife—

And children and fair—

To solace all the woes of life,

And all its joys to yield.

Of temper sweet—and yielding will—

Of firm yet pliant mind—

With all my faults to love me still

With sentiment refined.

And as Time's car incessant runs,

And fortune fills my store,

I want, of daughters and of sons,

From right to half to do.

I want (alas! no mortal dare

Such bliss on earth to crave?)

That all the girls be honest and fair,

And all the boys be brave.

I want a warm and faithful friend

To cheer the adverse hour;

Who ne'er to flatter will descend,

Nor bend the knee to power.

Not crown, nor scepter would I wrong

My most soul to see;

And that my friendship prove as strong

For him as his for me.

I want the scale of power and place;

The exalt of command;

Charged by the people's unthought grace

To rule my native land.

Not crown, nor scepter would I wrong

My most soul to see;

And that my friendship prove as strong

For him as his for me.

Washington, Aug. 21, 1841.

HOME.

Home is not merely four square walls,

Though hung with pictures nicely gilded;

Home is where affection calls.

Filled with smiles the heart hath builded.

Home is where the faithful dove

Sailing 'neath the heavens above

Home is where there's one to love,

Home is where there's one to love us.

Home is not merely four or five us.

Home is where the heart can bleed—

Where there's some kind heart to cheer it!

Home is where affection calls.

None to welcome, none to greet us.

Home is sweet, and only sweet,

When there's one we love to meet us.

MYSTERIES OF THE NEWSPAPER

Press.

The Tribune and How it is Made—its Manager and his Assistants.

Here we are at the door of the editorial room. Step within this little entry, and smell a small spring fitted into the side of the door casing. Before the distant tinkle of the bell dies away little Jonny Weinheimer, the office boy, opens the door, and throws a suspicious glance at us from his black eyes. We are in the City Editor's

Dye want to see 'm?' replied Jonny

Weinheimer, in answer to our inquiry.

"Certainly, if he is discharged."

"I'll tell you in a second."

Jonny peeps through a small hole in the ground glass of the door to Young's room,

then darts back to a match, safe hanging at our side, and pulls therefrom two square

sheets of letter paper.

"Please write your name on this paper—

if you've got your cards with you, they'll do us as well. I'll take 'em in to Mr.

Young."

Our cards go in, and in ten seconds we are ushered into the presence of the Managing Editor of the Tribune. You glance at John Russell Young, and then gaze back at

Jonny, as if you thought he was perpetrating a joke at our expense. What! this blue-eyed boy, the Managing Editor of the most influential journal in America! You can hardly believe it. In personal appearance Mr. Young is the most insignificant person about the office. He is light complexioned, has a large, sloping head, that ched with brown hair, a clear forehead, and a prominent nose, and is as quick of motion as a sparrowhawk. He is of medium height, says five feet eight. His words flow from his lips in rapid succession, as if each one was</
