"Let me tell you what Protection is. I can but illustrate it by example. In Pennsylvania, iron ore, limestone and coal; the three principal elements of the iron manufacture, are found so near together, in such large quantities, and of such superior quality, that any one would think that iron could be manufactured there cheaper and better than any where else in the world; yet when the Pennsylvania iron maker has made his iron and offers it for sale, he finds that a New York to merchant can bring similar iron all the way from England, and can pay freight on it, and then pay the freight on it all the way from New York to the very door of the Pennsylvania foundry, and sell it cheaper than the Pennsylvania foundry, and sell it cheaper than the from New York to the very door of the Pennsylvanian foundry, and sell it cheaper than the Pennsylvanian can. What is the cause? There are several, but the principal one is this. In order to make iron, it takes a little iron ore, a little limestone, a little coal, and a prodigious amount of labor. The three first ingredients are as cheap in Pennsylvania as anywhere; but the last and principal one. Labor, is so much dearer in Pennsylvania and in the whole of the United States than in England, that, in spite of the cheapness of the other ingredients, the iron costs so much the ingredients, the iron costs so much the cuter in the cost in the cuter in the cuter in the cost in the cost in the cuter in the cost in the cost in the cost in the cuter in the labor. In all the coarser manufactures we need no protection because of the small amount of labor entering into their production. In the manufacture of iron and many other commodities labor is the chief item and in all these, without protection we are undersold by foreign manufacturers, because laborers in England and Europe get wages harely sufficient to keep soul and body together. We have no alternative but to protect our laborers or abandon those manufactures into which labor enters as a large element in the cost of production. New York, June 4. According to a statement of Spanish spies in this city, the friends of the Cuban revolutionists have sent out thirteen expeditions from the United States in aid of the Cubans, which have been safely landed. The largest number of men on any one of these expeditions was 450, the smallest 30.

The materials of war shipped in these vessels included six batterries of artillery and an immense supply of Spencer rifler; and the whole number of men which they carried is estimated at 5,000. This full brigade of veterans—the gift of the American people to Cuba—is to-day part of the army of Cespedes, and we may soon expect to hear from them in a desperate if not decisive battle with the Spaniards.

Mr. H. did not design in this portion of his essay to advocate protection, but it is one of the strongest arguments to the laboring man, that we have yet seen in favor of protection. Here is an Englishman who is well acquainted with the manufacture of iron in England, who, though an enemy to protection, be constrained in honesty to acknowledge that it is alone because of the starvation wages paid to british laborers that they are enabled to undersel American manufactures.
