Now, it is evident that if the great solvent, the gastric juice, is not produced in sufficient quantity, or if the mechanical action of the tomach is not sufficiently brisk, the first process of digestion will be but imperfectly verformed. It is also clear that if the liver, which plays such an important part in changing the nourishing portion of the chyme into the material of the blood, is congested, or in any unnatural condition, the second process will not be thoroughly accomplished. The result of the two failures is dyspepsia, combicated with biliousness.

The mode in which HOSTETTER'S BIT TERS operate in such cases is this: they invigorate the cellular membrane of the stomach, which evolves the gastric juice.
