PAYING FARMING.—Two things are true of farmers as a class. But few of them ever come to a great wealth. Probably no business in the world so sure an avenue of support, and this is no small consideration in these days of fluctuations. The majority of farmers feel that farming is perpetual slavery, because that after hard steady work from one year's end to the other, they find themselves at the end of the year just where they started from. The price of farm products are high, the farmer is economical, sells the best of everything, denies himself and family, is up early and late, and just keeps his head above water. We think this is a truthful picture of the majority of farmers. A few like John Johnston, of Geneva, New York, rise gradually from this condition to one of abundant wealth. What makes the difference between these two classes? We answer that in every case the difference is in head work. The majority of farmers tread right on in the old groove regardless of the immense improvements that have been made in modern agriculture, improvements as important as the application of steam in mechanics or the loom in manufacturing. Suppose a manufacturer disregarding the fact of the loom should attempt to make cloth as our grandmothers made it; why he could not come into competition at all with other manufacturers and would lose ground. He would stand in just the position that thousands of farmers occupy, who ignore the modern improvements in the cultivation of the soil. We are aware that the information necessary to change has been locked up in many costly volumes written in a scientific language that the farmer did not understand, but this difficulty has now been overcome and the whole subject has been reduced into one ordinary sized volume, written in the plainest and most practical manner; it is entitled "How to Make the Farm Pay." This volume treats of every subject in which the farmer is interested, the first chapter treats of drainage as the foundation of all improved culture, and gives plain practical rules for all the operations of drainage. The second chapter treats of plowing, showing when, where, how, and what to plow. The third chapter is upon manures, and is one of the most interesting and valuable we have ever seen; it shows just how and where the manure goes to waste, and how to be doubly economical in quality and quantity. There are also full directions for the purchase and use of commercial fertilizers after the most has been made of every farmer has at his hand. This chapter if read, and its directions followed, would surely double the wealth of every farmer in ten years. Chapter four treats of the purchase, use and care of all farm implements. Chapter five of the cultivation of the soil. Chapter six of the making of hay. Chapter seven of crop rotation, and chapter eight on special crops and the rotation of crops. This chapter gives the latest information on the cultivation of cotton, rice, tobacco, flax, hemp, hops, beets for sugar, &c., &c. Chapters nine to twelve inclusive, treat of domestic animals, breeding, raising, care, management, and feeding, and particularly of all diseases of domestic animals with plain, simple remedies. No man who owns a single animal can afford to neglect the information contained in these four chapters. Chapter thirteen to eighteen treat of the cultivation of large and small fruits, showing how millions of acres of now almost worthless lands may be made to yield large and paying crops, how every farmer may make $200 to $600 per acre from apples or grapes. The young men who read these chapters and commence farming on these principles will not be the poor plodders their predecessors have been. "Took wealth is in store for those who catch the idea and spirit of the book. Chapter nineteen treats of the planning and building of farm buildings. Chapter twenty of Market Gardening and Farmers' Gardens. Chapter twenty-one of various miscellaneous items, as fences, farm laborers, forest trees, &c., &c. Chapter twenty-two contains nearly three hundred choice receipts for cooking, preserving, &c., and the last chapter gives the symptoms and remedies for the ordinary diseases of children and animals, with directions for preserving the health, and other matters of interest. We think we are justified in saying that so much information of use to the farmer is not to be had for ten times the price anywhere else. The book, as the reader will notice from the description in our paper, has one hundred and forty illustrations, which we have neither time or space to describe. We say buying this book if you wish to learn the secrets of paying farming. See advertisement in another column.

Let Common Sense Decide. What is the rational mode of procedure in cases of general debility and nervous prostration? Do not reason till so that judgment stimulation is required. To resort to violent purgation in such a case is as absurd as it would be to bleed a starving man. Yet it is done every day. Yes, this stupid and unphilosophical practice is continued in the teeth of the great fact that physical weakness, with all the nervous disturbances that accompany it, is more certainly and rapidly relieved by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters than by any other medicine at present known. It is a rational mode of procedure in cases of general debility and nervous prostration, and it is the only one that is rational and judicious. It is the only one that is rational and judicious. It is the only one that is rational and judicious.

THE AMERICAN ALMANAC, for the new year, has arrived for delivery gratis to all who call for it. This little annual has the largest circulation of any book in the world, made by the fact that it furnishes the best medical advice which is available to the people—enables them to determine what their complaints are and how to cure them. It contains the startling announcement of the configuration of a world, or the combustion of one of the stars in the firmament with all its attendant phenomena. 1Jan1m
