

GRANDMA. We miss her from the old fire-side, Where sturdy her vacant chair;

We miss her from the garden-seat, With the children round her knee;

We miss her from the parlour, At our noon and evening prayer;

We miss her from the day will come, We, too, shall go that way;

We miss her from the old fire-side, Where sturdy her vacant chair;

We miss her from the garden-seat, With the children round her knee;

We miss her from the parlour, At our noon and evening prayer;

We miss her from the day will come, We, too, shall go that way;

We miss her from the old fire-side, Where sturdy her vacant chair;

ABOUT GLOVES. It is a pretty piece of symbolism, kept in our formal, unpoetic, anti-poetical old times,

In 1856 Lord Carnarvon held his third maiden assize in Lincoln; the third in six years; so the authorities presented him with a magnificent pair of white gloves,

Long before our time gloves were worn, and held to be symbolic too. Xenophon speaks of the Persians as endeavoring to clothe their heads, their feet,

Who does not know that beautiful story of Bernard Gilpin, when he went into the Church of the Quarrelsome, and saw the gloves hung up as a general challenge to all comers who would care to take an ill-conditioned fellow's insult

At Barnstable a large glove decked with dahlias is hung out from the window of Quay Hall, the oldest building in the city, and while it hangs the fair is going on, and when it is withdrawn the fair is at an end; and at Chester, so famous for its gloves, they do the same thing.

ARTESIAN WELLS AT CHICAGO. The Artesian wells, now discharging one and a quarter million of gallons of the purest water ever seen on the flow of the globe, continue to excite a deal of curiosity and wonder.

THEY are called wells in one age for not knowing what men are called wells for in the age before.
