the Chatrager of the State Landard. By order of the Democratic State Committee.
WILLIAM A. WALLACE,
The Committee of the Democratic State Committee.

POLITICAL RADICALISM.

Radicalism does not belong entirely to one political party. There are Radicals on all sides and on all questions; and in just so much as their radicalism grows in intensity, are they departing from the true ground of statesmanship to that of demagogueism.

Everybody can see the destructive course of the Congressional Radicals; every man who desires can tell where they depart from the true, safe and who loves his country can fail to point out their errors and denounce them. This we have done and shall continue

Some people seem to be of the opinion, that to denounce radicalism in fitfane and impious expressions, us those honest nor truthful.

Change.—The bill to divide the Borough of Danville into four wards has passed the first and second readings in the House. By this bill the Borough will be divided as follows: All that to usurp the prerogatives of Congress, and to assail this body with indecent language all over the country. Sir, unless this committee take charge of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it, the Congress of the matter and proceed with it. ter and proceed with it, the Congress might as well lay down its power. They are seldom anything more than stump-speeches made with closed eyesandaddressed ostensibly to the Father of all; while in sentiment, language and general style they would shock any intelligent and cultivated audience. Last Winter one of these effusions began "O Lord, Thou has ruled this world for six thousand years, and, as we believe, Thou hast ruled it well!" People may fancy this is either thanksgiving or prayer; it is really little better than blasphemy and not a whit less offensive. It was a condescending indorsement, on behalf of Congress, of the Almighty's behalf of Congress, of the Almighty's official conduct; it was a little surprising not to see it followed by a resolution of the House to-day, referring the impeachment question to the Judiciary Committee, and authorizing said committee, to sit during the session, or recess of Congress. The proposition gave rise to some spirited debate. Ashley opened the disassion with a rehash of his old speech, charging the President with all sorts of Judge Spalding (Radical), denounced the whole scheme of impeachment as consumate folly, and made a strong appeal to his party friends to pause and consider the importance of the movement they are seeking to inaugurate, declaring that for himself he would resixt it so long as he held a seat on the floor of the House, General B. F. Butler was the next speaker. He, of course, favored impeachment, whether the evidence would justify it or not. He put sity. After he had concluded, Ashley proposed to take a vote without allowing any further debate, but some of the Radicals around him objected, and Mr. Brooks, of New York, was recognized, listened to with profound attention, and to the House and the country. After Chanler, of New York, the question vestigation was agreed to. The Speaker then announced the following standing Committee on the Judiciary for the present Congress: James F. Wilson, of Iowa : George S. Boutwell, Massachusetts; Thomas Williams, Pennsylvania, William Lawrence of Ohio; Francis ing, nor which is anxious to marry, and Messrs.
