

CURRENT ITEMS.

Thad Stevens is sick again. Liverpool England markets, April 6th give pig meat, 6s. 6d. The Russian session treaty has been ratified by the Senate. The Legislative appropriation bill, disburses about four million of dollars. Annapolis William James Andrew Jackson Jones, is a registered colored voter in Washington. Chase is a candidate for the Presidency and is to be run by Parsons, the Marshall of the District of Columbia, as chief flogman. In one family near Dalton, Ga., four children died of starvation in February, and it is believed that others have died from the same cause. In telegraphy it appears that the New World leads the Old, America has 90,000 miles of telegraph wires; Europe 60,000, and India 4,000. There is a report that the Governor of Delaware will appoint Thomas A. Bayard, son of the late Senator, to the name to the Senatorial vacancy. The Radical Legislature of Ohio have passed the resolution leaving it to a vote of the people to strike the word "white" from their State Constitution. A coal mine explosion occurred in the Cloverhill pit, Chesterfield county, Virginia, on the 14th inst., by which twenty-five white men and fifty negroes were killed. The Pennsylvania Legislature has passed an act abolishing the State tax on personal property, and substituting therefor a levy of $300,000, apportioned on the basis of the population of the State according to population. A hog law that was picked up on drift-wood in the Mississippi, near St. Louis, proved to contain the body of a dead Indian, in full dress and war paint, with bow and quiver of arrows on his back. The municipal election in Hartford, Connecticut, was carried by the Democrats on the eighth by six hundred majority, a gain of one hundred and thirty since the State election, one week ago. A fight took place at Yorktown, Virginia, a few days ago, between the United States soldiers and a negro procession, during which a negro was shot. The soldiers are in prison awaiting trial by court martial for murder. Twenty years ago there were no newspapers in California. To-day there are twelve daily, one tri-weekly, and forty-one weeklies in San Francisco alone. In the remainder of the State there are twelve dailies, one tri-weekly, and seventy-three weeklies. Sumner introduced a resolution to expel Senator Saulsbury for drunkenness. Well, it is a good thing, Zed Candler, drunken Senator Sprague, drunken Dick Yates? Why don't he include their names? Saulsbury is a democrat, the rest are Radicals. That's what's the matter. The negroes in Haiti have been trying on the French judges. They rebelled against President Gervais, and overthrew the Government. On the thirteenth of March he resigned, and embarked with his family for Jamaica, certainly a fine move. The United States and Hancock counties of West Virginia, constituting the "Pan Handle," which reaches up between the border of Pennsylvania and the Ohio river, are petitioning for annexation to the Keystone State, expecting thereby to lighten their taxes and increase the value of their land. It is announced that in the steel-rail mills, at the Cyclops steel works, Sheffield, a mass of iron weighing one ton is dropped from a height of thirty-six and a half feet upon the middle of the rail, placed upon supports, as a test of its strength. The rails rarely break, but occasionally bend, under this tremendous trial. Hon. James A. Bayard, of Wilmington, Delaware, has been appointed United States Senator from that place, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. George Read Riddle. Mr. Bayard formerly occupied the same position, but resigned in 1864. He is an experienced statesman, and his counsel and advice will be of great value at this crisis in the affairs of the nation. It has been decided by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, that for the purpose of transferring property from husband to wife, or from wife to husband, or from one of them to both jointly, deeds made to a third party, and then back from him to either or both, such instruments need not be stamped as conveyances, as there is no sale, but only as agreements; but if they contain powers of attorney, these should have their appropriate stamps. It is said that a man body changes entirely every seven years, so that by the time a man has reached his twenty-first year his body has been renewed throughout three times. None of the original particles of which he was composed at the time of his birth remain and he is in fact a new man. A young man, who was born in 1840, is now in the process of growth and decay is going on all the time, and the delicate fibres and tissues of his body are renewed as fast as they disappear. Gen. Frank P. Blair, one of the most gallant soldiers in the army, a man who fought the power of rebels in St. Louis, and who was opposing slavery when Butler was giving his celebrated votes for Jeff Davis at Charleston, has been rejected by the Senate as Minister to Austria. The Radicals are remarkably fond of Blair, and have given him a blanket over him on one of the battlefields, the Senate would probably have passed him.—Pittsburg Post. The Twelfth Annual Report of the Bond-street Homeopathic Dispensary, founded by Dr. Otto Fulgraff, has just been issued. During the year ending Feb. 1st, 1870 patients have been treated, of whom 2460 are reported cured, 1,676 were relieved, and 60 died. In 2,611 cases the results are unknown. The number of prescriptions given was 68,098, including 8,246 outdoor visits. Of Asiatic cholera sixteen cases were treated without a single fatal result. A great fire commenced in Wilkes-barre, about five minutes after on Tuesday morning. It broke out directly opposite the telegraph office, and spread to all the neighboring buildings on both sides of the street. The Record of the Times office and fifty or twenty more buildings were destroyed. The Wyoming Bank, being fire-proof, was saved. The loss is estimated at from $20,000 to $100,000, which is about one-half insured. Commissioner Harlan, of the Internal Revenue Department, has just made a decision relative to Marriage Certificates and says that the law and the subject, which all parties interested will do well to make a note of. He says that if a marriage certificate is to be returned to some public officer to constitute part of the public record it requires no stamp, but if it is to be delivered to the parties, it must have a stamp attached. Parties holding certificates that are not stamped, should have their documents stamped without delay.

The Columbian.

JOHN G. FRIEZE, EDITOR. CHAS. H. BROCKWAY, EDITOR.

BLOOMSBURG, FRIDAY, APRIL 13, 1867.

BLOOMSBURG LITERARY INSTITUTE.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The Hall was well filled on Thursday evening, and the exercises began with prayer by the Rev. J. R. Dimm; and after a song by the class, at the request of the Board of Trustees, Hon. Judge Elwell delivered an appropriate and admirable address, in brief reciting the history of the Institute, and urging the friends of education, to push on to thorough completion the building, the grounds, the library and necessary apparatus; and assuring them that thus affording their children the means of an ample education they were bestowing upon them a legacy which would be forever a blessing.

Rev. Mr. Dimm made a suggestion that subscriptions to stock, payable in five annual instalments be made; for the purpose of securing the money needed to complete building and grounds. A suggestion likely to meet with favor.

THE EXERCISES.

The evening exercises were engaged in by the following Misses: L. E. John, Appleman, M. John, Elwell, Lutz, Sharpless, Bittenbender, Clark, Edgar, Caslow, Irving, McKinney, M. E. Sharpless, Armstrong, Pursel, Brower, Rupert, Ager, Robbins, and Masters J. A. Clark, Bomby, Hartman, Neal, G. A. Clark, Pursel, Bittenbender, Turner, Smith, B. Pardee, G. P. Waller, Irving, Swisher, Rupert, Sawyer, L. Rutter, Sloan, Morris, Lutz, McKelvy, Buckalew, Mendenhall, Bittenbender, L. E. Waller, H. Rutter, Dillon, Fank, Thomas, Evans, Edgar, Appleman, Gorton, E. Rutter, Woods, G. McKelvy, Van Buskirk, Hendershot, J. K. Morris, Jr., Melick, D. J. Waller, Jr., Little, Unangst, Conner and Elwell.

The speaking and also the scenic representations on Thursday evening were decided improvements on those of the preceding evening. In fact the students were beginning to get the "hang of the new school House," and spoke with more ease and self-possession. Indeed, considering that many of them never faced an audience before, they did admirably. Hereafter, when they have a little more confidence, a little more training and a little more experience, we may think to do them kindness and justice by a timely criticism upon style and manner, if then required.

THE FINALE.

There were several pieces and scenes that elicited very decided applause, notwithstanding the positive prohibition upon any such demonstration, announced by Prof. Carver. The regulation exactly meets our views. Such a Hall and such an occasion is no place for noisy applause. In the Senates and public assemblies of Greece, the profound silence indicated the intense interest of the audience; and the noise, buzz and shouting of the assembly betokened to the speaker or actor impatience or disgust. No other thing is so gratifying to an orator as profound attention; for more than any demonstration it indicates the deepest interest in the discourse.

Prof. Carver is right, and we trust he will enforce strictly the rules suggested in his remarks.

THE CONNECTICUT ELECTION, AND THE REASON WHY DEMOCRATS OBTAINED THE GREAT VICTORY, OVER WHICH THEY SO MUCH REJOICE.

We beg that our Democratic readers will carefully read and note the following from the New Haven Register, one of the organs of the Connecticut Democracy:

We take the earliest opportunity in this, our first issue after our victory, to render our hearty thanks, and the thanks of every Democrat in the State, to the brave and true men, who, under their own conservative banner, rallied with us to the rescue of the Constitution. Believing them to be acting in good faith, the Democracy allowed them all they asked in the way of platform and candidates, and they asked for nothing inconsistent with their principles or ours. They then took their position in the grand line of patriots, and like Morgan's riflemen in the revolution, they poured their steady fire into the Radical ranks until they struck their colors to the combined Democratic and Conservative forces. There were other honest but half-converted Republicans that wanted to go with us. They were dissatisfied with the disunionists, yet were afraid of the Democracy. Seeing that we can be both just and generous, and that it is better to act in good faith, we have been shamefully misrepresented in our policy, our principles and our purposes, they will be with us hereafter in great numbers. All honor to the noble band of Conservatives in Connecticut—and to this every Democrat will say amen.

UNITED STATES COINS AS CURIOSITIES.

We learn from Philadelphia papers that a complete series of the coins of the United States, consisting of twenty-eight pieces of money, in gold, silver, nickel, and bronze, have been prepared, put up in an elaborately finished case, and that they are to be sent to the Exposition, duly labelled "coinage of the United States, 1867." We protest against this contribution to the Exposition, and for the following reasons: If they are sent out to convey the idea that these are specimens of the money current in the United States, it is a clear case of false pretences on the part of the exhibitor; if they are forwarded as curiosities, they would fall to surprise, or even interest, any one on the continent, where gold and silver coins, of very much superior coinage in point of execution, are everywhere common; but if the government desires to delight as well as astonish anybody, let this choice case of coins be publicly exhibited in the leading towns and cities of the United States. Such an exhibition would not fail to revive pleasant recollections of a period when real money was in circulation, and when such money would be as much valued as the worth of its represented value.

SPEECH OF HON. C. R. BUCKALEW, GOVERNOR OF SOUTHERN STATES.

Mr. President, I listened on the 15th of February to a very interesting and very able speech against this bill delivered by the Senator from Maryland. He spoke with great effect upon that occasion, and his argument was well calculated to carry conviction to the members of the Senate and to the citizens of the country. It is only necessary to say, in brief, that the Senator's effort upon that occasion was equal to his best efforts upon other occasions, and at former times. I have great confidence in his intellectual powers; in fact that confidence goes to the extent of inducing the belief that he could have made, if he had that choice, a speech equally effective and powerful as an intellectual performance upon the opposite side of the question to that which he advocated. But what was remarkable, at least to me as a member of the audience upon that occasion, was that he was not only a powerful speaker, but he was also a powerful writer. Upon those arguments and upon this veto message which has now been placed to us, and which, like them, will be placed upon the permanent, enduring records of the country, we are content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have secured the restoration of the rights of the citizen. Against all these and other features of the bill which is before us for reconsideration we have struggled; we have done our best. But, sir, we are not content to stand, for by them we are content to be judged. We have resisted military and despotic government in the American States with whatever of power, whether of argument or of vote, we possessed. We have resisted the illegitimate and unauthorized extension of Federal power in these States of the South which are unrepresented in the two Houses of Congress. We have resisted the degradation and pollution of suffrage by unlicensed and illegitimate agents, and have