4. The attick made by these machines is much more firm, clastic, and dumble, especially upon settlets which require to be washed and fromed than any other stitch.

5. This stitch, owing to the manner in which the under thread is inwrought, is much the most plump and beautiful in use, and retains this plumpiness and beauty even upon articles fre-quently washed and fromed until they are worn

6. The structure of the seam is such that, though t be cut or broken at intervals of only a few sitches, it will neither open, run, nor ravel, but chasta firm and durable.

7. Unlike other machines, these faster both ands of the seam by their own operation.

8. With three machines, while silk is used upon the right or face side of the seam, cotton may be used upon the other side without lessening the strength or durability of the seam. This can be fone on no other muchine, and is a great saving open all articles stitched or made up with sills.

9. These machines, in addition to their superio merits as instruments for sewing, by a change of adjustment, easily learned and practised, execute the most beautiful and permanent cabrielly
