

The Columbian.

BLOOMSBURG, FRIDAY, APRIL 19, 1867.

The Republican is defending "Spoons" Butler.

The several acts played by the Band last Tuesday evening were excellent.

Mr. OSTRANDER has been confirmed Master at Danville, after a hard contest.

WILLIAM L. MADDOCK AND CO. dealers in fine groceries, No. 115 South Third Street (opposite the Girard Bank) Philadelphia.

The largest, best and cheapest assortment of Stoves and Tinware in the county, is at the store of William M. Ditt, Light Street.

The Radical-Negro-Suffrage State Convention will meet at Williamsport, on Wednesday, June 26th, to nominate a candidate for the Supreme Bench.

A CONCERT will be given in Seminary Hall on Saturday evening April 20th, by Dr. J. J. Franch's class in vocal music. Doors open at 8 o'clock. Admission twenty-five cents.

OUR subscription list is growing constantly and steadily. The blows we are dealing the Radical paper here are felt, and our friends show their appreciation by circulating a pure, decent and live paper.

THE COLUMBIAN account of the Bloomsburg Literary Institute Dedication has been highly spoken of by many as the best, fullest and by far most readable. We shall continue to merit the commendation of the public.

IMPORTANCE OF A VOTE.—The New Haven Register says that Mr. Logan, the Democratic candidate in the Sixteenth Senatorial District of Connecticut is defeated by four votes; and this gives the Senate to the Republicans by one majority.

C. B. BROCKWAY has been appointed by the President, as Consul to San Jose, in Costa Rica. He has also been confirmed by the Senate. This appointment was not only unsolicited, but unexpected, as he knew nothing of it until after his confirmation. He has not decided to go.

OUR enterprising druggist, John R. Moyer, has just replenished his stock from the Eastern markets, with an assortment such as the wants of the public demand. Mr. Moyer has long been established in the business, and therefore knows what the multitude need. His place of business is on the West side of Market Street.

THE editors of the COLUMBIAN are writing sanctimonious lectures on morality.—Republican.

The readers of the Republican never expect to find anything of that sort in its columns. They are treated to a very different sort of reading; and we leave the public to judge which is more likely to be profitable and beneficial.

The heaviest charge that the Radical Republican can bring against the COLUMBIAN, is that it is a moral paper, that it publishes lectures on morality, and that its editors write what the radical in elegant language calls "religious squibs." We believe we can bear the full weight of that charge, and trust we shall ever be found to teach and practice all the Christian virtues, not forgetting liberality and chastity.

On Friday, April 26th by order of the Grand Lodge I. O. O. F. a national Thanksgiving will be held throughout the United States. We published the order a few weeks ago. In accordance with it, Van Camp Lodge at this place will meet at the M. E. Church on the day specified, at half past ten A. M. Rev. J. R. Dimm will deliver a sermon, and Rev. Mr. Price an address upon the occasion. Members of adjoining lodges, and the public generally are invited to attend.

SENATOR SALTSMAN SENT HOME TO REFORM.—In consequence of the continued drunkenness of Senator SALTSMAN, of Delaware, a resolution was offered a few days ago in the Senate to expel him. His friends have taken him home where he will remain during the recess. Unless he reforms he will be expelled.—Republican.

It is scarcely necessary to say to our readers that there is not a word of truth in the above. To be found in the Republican is sufficient evidence of its falsity. Its editor must feel desperate.

The water has been let into the North Branch Canal, but boating is at a standstill. Huge masses of ice cover the tow-path above Nanticoke dam, and it is estimated that it will cost five hundred dollars to remove them.

We have also been informed that a number of rocks and stones have been thrown into the canal above Wilkes-Barre, which will require time to have them removed. The prospect for the boatmen is not brilliant as we are sorry to say. We know of no class of men more useful, and yet who are so poorly paid for the amount of labor and privation they undergo.

P. JOHN claims to have got another letter. Of course it is a profane one. Every man who writes to him seems to be able to take his exact measure, and oaths and vulgarity abound. If such letters were genuine, which they are not, no gentleman would publish them; if false, as they are, P. John alone would do so. So, again, when he writes to himself a letter, not stated to contain two dollars, he forthwith abuses and denounces the writer; but two dollars fills the place of his soul to overflowing, and he goes off in ecstasies.

THE KALEIDOSCOPE.

—A map of busy life—its fluctuations and its vast concerns.

NO. XVI.

POPE'S VIRGINIA CAMPAIGN.

The writer of this and the few succeeding numbers of the Kaleidoscope does not pretend to give a history of the army under Gen. Pope's command, nor of any particular Corps or Division in it, but will briefly relate such incidents as passed under his own observation together with such historical notes and topographical descriptions as he may deem interesting to the public.

The impolicy of the Administration in making rapid changes of commanders was never better illustrated than when Mr. Lincoln placed Gen. Pope at the head of "The Army of Virginia." His reputation in the regular army, before the war, was bad, and his only recommendation was the victory achieved by the troops under his command at Island No. 10.

Like many other western generals, he believed that the armies of the East had never been fought, and that the rebel Army of Virginia was as undisciplined as a mass of guerrillas as those who had opposed him on the Mississippi.

Any good opinion the army may have formed of him, however, was dissipated by the arrogant order issued by him upon taking command, in which he said: "I have come to you from the West, where we have always seen the backs of the enemies—now from any army whose business it has been to seek the adversary, and to beat him when found; whose policy has been attack and not defense."

He also spoke in contemptuous terms of "bases of supplies, and lines of retreat," and boasting declared "his headquarters would be in the saddle."

Another grave mistake on his part was the order issued to the men "to live off of the country" which they interpreted to mean unlimited license, and which soon spread demoralization through the ranks. Not only was discipline relaxed, and straggling frequent, but the inhabitants were incited to greater resistance by scenes of rapine and outrage, which finally brought out Jeff. Davis's famous order to treat Pope's officers as "felons, cut-throats, and thieves."

At the time Pope joined, his army was much scattered, our Government having been trying the plan of spreading the smallest possible number of men, over greatest possible amount of surface. Pope wisely commenced concentrating his command for the purpose as he expressed it, of "laying off on the enemies flanks." Our Division was encamped in the vicinity of the beautiful city of Warrenton, then occupied by our troops for the first time. I say "occupied" because neither Geary's nor Bleeker's Division's stopped long enough even to try the virtue of the celebrated Farquhar White Sulphur Springs. This place had long been the resort of aristocratic Southerners, and one of the hotels alone was capable of accommodating 1000 people. Chief Justice Marshall had made it his home.—Commodore A. P. Catesby Jones of revolutionary fame had his residence in its vicinity, and men of later date such as "Extra Billy Smith," and the commander of the "Florida."

At the opening of the campaign, Pope's force amounted to 50,000 men. The Corps were commanded by McDowell, Banks, and Sigel. King's Division of McDowell's Corps was at Fredericksburg, his brigade commanders being Auger and Patrick. Our Division was commanded by Gen. James B. Ricketts of Bull Run fame, and he was ably supported by Hartsuff, Tower and Dugrey. Banks had under him Crawford, Green, Prince, Gordon and Geary; and Sigel, who was in the valley with Fremont's old command was supported by Cooper and Slough. Bayard commanded our cavalry, and Hatch led Bank's troopers. Our Battery was commanded by Capt. E. W. Matthews, and the sections during that campaign were under Lieuts. Godbold, Case, and Brockway, Lieut. Ricketts being absent on recruiting service. We were armed with six pieces of rifled artillery, the guns being three inches in diameter, yet were capable of throwing a ten pounder shot or shell the distance of two and a half miles. The battery was well drilled, fully equipped, and went into the campaign with one hundred and fifty men.

On the 5th of August (1862) we moved from our camp on the Hedgerman River, and shaped our course towards Culpeper, where a concentration of troops was to be made. The day was so intensely hot that an unusual number of horses and men gave out and were left by the wayside; and the clouds of dust caused by the tramping of so many men made respiration and sight equally difficult. We encamped for the night on Hazel River, and a few moments after the stream was swarming with men enjoying the unusual luxury of a bath. At this point "glorious Sprague Carrel's" Brigade joined us, in which was the 8th and 11th Pennsylvania Regiments.

The following day we reached Culpeper, to which point Bank's Corps had preceded us. Stonewall Jackson's command, we ascertained was at Gordonsville, twenty-five miles to the South. Culpeper, like Warrenton, is rich in historic legends. In the Clerk's office in the Court House appears this venerable entry: "20th July, 1790. (O. S.) George Washington, Genl. produced a Commission from the President and Master of William and Mary College, appointing him to be surveyor of this county, which was read, and thereupon he took the usual oath to his majesty's person and government, and took and subscribed the abjuration oath and test, and then took the oath of surveyor, according to law."

Here also were raised the celebrated "minute men" of the Revolution, of whom John Randolph said in the Senate "they were raised in a minute, armed in a minute, marched in a minute, fought in a minute, and vanished in a minute." They were organized by order of Patrick Henry, then commander of the Virginia forces, and among their officers was Thomas Marshall, and his son Chief Justice Marshall. Their flag bore the inscription "The Culpeper Minute men. Liberty or Death!"

The centre of the field had a colored rattlesnake, intended to represent Virginia; and twelve rattles, one for each of the other States, and below the words "don't tread on me." A writer of the time adds, "The Corps were dressed in green hunting shirts with the words 'LIBERTY OR DEATH' in large white letters on their bosoms. In their hats were buck-tails, and in their belts they carried tomahawks and scalping knives." A revolutionary war, seeing the inscription on their breasts thought it too severe; but remarked that he was willing to enlist if the words were altered to "Liberty or be Crippled."

Culpeper also had the honor of being the home of Gen. Edward Stevens of Revolutionary fame, who acquired great distinction at the battles of Great Bridge, Brandywine, Germantown, Camden, Guilford Court House, and Siege of York.

While her annals are thus noble, however, they are stained by the persecution of Baptist ministers about a century ago. Among the many sufferers was the Rev. James Ireland who was imprisoned in the county jail for his religious opinions, the Virginians in this instance proving to be as intolerant as their Puritan contemporaries—some of their persecutors attempted to blow up the room with powder, but they could only raise half a pound, and its only effect was to loosen a plank in the floor.

They next tried to smoke him out with brimstone and Indian pepper, but failing in this as well, a doctor and the jailer actually administered poison, and though it did not kill him at once, it hastened him to an early grave. Such was Christianity in those days, and I fear we witnessed as atrocious crimes on the same soil under the guise of patriotism. Mr. Ireland in giving an account of his persecutions said: "My prison was a place in which I enjoyed much of the Divine presence; a day seldom passed without some signal token of the Divine goodness towards me, which generally led me to subscribe my letters in these words, 'From my palace in Culpeper.'"

This place is the home of the celebrated Mosby who is now practising law there. Mayor Wallace of Washington also was raised there, and owns a fine place in town.
