The Grape. We have, for several years, paid particular attention to articles in agricultural periodicals as well as in the regular Reports from the Agricultural Department at Washington, upon the subject of grape culture, for the purpose of forming an opinion upon the comparative merits of the various leading varieties of native grapes.

The Concord is the grape of most popular and in quality is famous by no other native grape. To say that it is delicious as a table grape, is to express the simple truth, and if it were larger and the vine more successful in cultivation, it would have no competitor.

Dr. C. W. Grant, of Java Island, in the Hudson River, has succeeded in introducing into this country two new varieties, seedlings produced by himself, which have a high character and command a high price. They are named Java and Javilla, and are no doubt, grapes of much merit.

At present the varieties in highest repute as fine grapes are Norton's Virginia and Lee's Seedling. The former is from Richmond, Virginia, and the latter originated at or near Cincinnati. They are both said to be very successful in the West, particularly in Ohio.

There was once a cobbler, who worked very hard and was very honest; but still he could not earn enough to live upon, and at last all he had in the world was gone, save just leather enough to make one pair of shoes.

Then he cut his leather out, all ready to make up next day, meaning to rise early in the morning to his work. His conscience was clear and his heart light amidst all his troubles; so he went peacefully to bed, left all his cares to Heaven, and soon fell asleep.

The same day a customer came in, and at the shop saw the cobbler's work, and willingly paid a price higher than usual for them; and the poor shoemaker, with the money, bought leather enough to make two pair more. In the evening he cut out the work, and went to bed early that he might get up and begin to-morrow next day; but he was saved all the trouble, for when he got up in the morning the work was done ready to his hand.

One evening about Christmas time, as he and his wife were sitting over the fire chatting together, he said to her, "I should like to sit up and watch to-night that no cobbler sees me, so that I can come and do my work for me." The wife liked the thought; so they left a light burning, and hid themselves in the corner of the room, behind a curtain that was hung up there, and watched what should happen.

As soon as it was midnight, there came in two little naked dwarfs; and they sat themselves upon the shoemaker's bench, took up all the work that was cut out, and began to ply with their little fingers, stitching and tapping and tapping away at such a rate, that the shoemaker was all wonder, and could not take his eyes off them. And on they went, till the job was quite done, and the shoes stood ready for use upon the table. This was long before daybreak; and then they bustled away as quick as lightning.

The next day the wife said to the shoemaker, "These little wights have made us rich, and we ought to be thankful to them, and do them a good turn if we can. I am quiddy to see them run about as they do; and indeed it is not very decent, for they have nothing upon their backs to keep off the cold. I'll tell you what, I will make each of them a shirt, and a waistcoat, and a pair of pantaloons into the bargain; and do you make each of them a little pair of shoes."

The thought pleased the good cobbler very much; and one evening when all things were ready, they laid them on the table, instead of the work that they used to cut out, and then went and hid themselves, to watch what the little elves would do.
