

The Columbian.

BLOOMSBURG, PA. FRIDAY MORNING, DEC. 30, 1867.

REPUBLICANISM.

While we have our own ideas as to the meaning of the above term as applied to a party, whenever we put them forth we are met by the objection that our statements are dictated by our prejudices, and are therefore not entitled to weight.

It is a sad, but indisputable truth, that the Republican party, despite its apparent strength, does not really occupy the position it shows in February.

It would be vain to deny that for the present the party have no money way. It would be equally useless to seek the cause of our weakness in any outward circumstances.

It is not because our party is so young that, before the election of '56, it can scarcely be said to have had an existence; for the younger we are the stronger and healthier we should be.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

It is not because there are no men in our ranks, for the best brain and soul of the country are with us. But it is because the majority of our adherents have never been as earnest as the Democratic masses.

It would have been well had we learned of our enemies, We should not then be resting for a moment on our laurels.

It is not because we are unwilling to practice what we preach. For we fear indeed that there are many who, although they talk of the equality and the inalienable rights of the black man, would still be unwilling to have him sit beside him in the jury box, or in the House of Representatives.

It is not because we profess to know men professing themselves Republicans, who say that they would no more eat with a negro at the same table, than they would sell their souls to Satan.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.

C. W. Campbell et al vs H. W. McReynolds et al—Action for a tract of land in the warranty of 'Andrew Clark,' situate now in Beaver Township, Freeze and Comly for the Plaintiff, and Clark and Baldy for the Defendant.

Verdict in favor of the Plaintiff for the land described in the writ, except about 20 acres thereof, shaded with green in the draft, which is made part of the verdict, and which 20 acres was not in this tract claimed by the Plaintiff.

Verdict in favor of the Plaintiff for $32.42.

Wm. Schuyler vs Samuel Yetter—Debt for plow sold. Little for Piff. Clark for Deft. Verdict for Piff.

James Strauss vs George Stricker—Action slander for words spoken. Clark for Piff. Freeze and Baldy for Deft. Verdict for the Plaintiff.

Samuel Waters vs C. E. Margerum—Action of detainer for lot in Catawissa. Jackson, Knorr and Whitmoyer for Piff. Clark and Baldy for Deft. The question was one purely of law, and under the charge of the Court, the Jury found a verdict for the Deft.

Deborah Dean vs Owen L. Dean—Action of detainer for lot of ground in Catawissa. Clark and Freeze for the Plaintiff, Knorr and Whitmoyer for Deft. Verdict of the Jury in favor of the Plaintiff.

James Robbins and wife vs Wm. Eves and wife—Action of slander. Freeze and Little for Piff. Whitmoyer and Knorr for Deft. The Piff. suffered a non-suit.

An adjourned argument Court will be held on Thursday, January 24, at 10 o'clock A.M.

A very large amount of business was disposed of during the term. A two weeks Court was ordered for February. The first week the original business and the second week criminal, if any remains over, and civil.

Court adjourned on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

THE PRISONERS OF STATE.

To the Editor of The Day-Book: Sir—The suggestions to the "Prisoners of State" which I was permitted to make through the columns of the Day-Book, are received with favor.

It is not because our party is so young that, before the election of '56, it can scarcely be said to have had an existence; for the younger we are the stronger and healthier we should be.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

HOW THEY MANAGE.

The Tribune of Saturday denies that Mr. Greeley has declared that the course pursued by the Radical party in the Southern States, as exemplified in the action of the Alabama Convention, is calculated "to bring odium upon the Republican party."

It is a sad, but indisputable truth, that the Republican party, despite its apparent strength, does not really occupy the position it shows in February.

It would be vain to deny that for the present the party have no money way. It would be equally useless to seek the cause of our weakness in any outward circumstances.

It is not because our party is so young that, before the election of '56, it can scarcely be said to have had an existence; for the younger we are the stronger and healthier we should be.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

It is not because there are no men in our ranks, for the best brain and soul of the country are with us. But it is because the majority of our adherents have never been as earnest as the Democratic masses.

It would have been well had we learned of our enemies, We should not then be resting for a moment on our laurels.

It is not because we are unwilling to practice what we preach. For we fear indeed that there are many who, although they talk of the equality and the inalienable rights of the black man, would still be unwilling to have him sit beside him in the jury box, or in the House of Representatives.

It is not because we profess to know men professing themselves Republicans, who say that they would no more eat with a negro at the same table, than they would sell their souls to Satan.

CONGRESSIONAL SUMMARY.

Dec. 18.—The President sent to the Senate yesterday a message giving his reasons for the suspension of the Hon. E. M. Stanton, as Secretary of War, on the ground of his refusal to resign his office, and that Mr. Stanton's message cannot be procured for publication, nor was it read in open Session.

It is a sad, but indisputable truth, that the Republican party, despite its apparent strength, does not really occupy the position it shows in February.

It would be vain to deny that for the present the party have no money way. It would be equally useless to seek the cause of our weakness in any outward circumstances.

It is not because our party is so young that, before the election of '56, it can scarcely be said to have had an existence; for the younger we are the stronger and healthier we should be.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

It is not because there are no men in our ranks, for the best brain and soul of the country are with us. But it is because the majority of our adherents have never been as earnest as the Democratic masses.

It would have been well had we learned of our enemies, We should not then be resting for a moment on our laurels.

It is not because we are unwilling to practice what we preach. For we fear indeed that there are many who, although they talk of the equality and the inalienable rights of the black man, would still be unwilling to have him sit beside him in the jury box, or in the House of Representatives.

It is not because we profess to know men professing themselves Republicans, who say that they would no more eat with a negro at the same table, than they would sell their souls to Satan.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

IMPORTANT TO SKATERS.—The Reading Dispatch says, in view of the approach of the skating season, the following may save our friends who indulge in the recreation of skating, no small amount of discomfort.

Before starting on the ice, bathe your feet in cold water, dry them perfectly and give them a good rubbing with a crash towel, or a pair of woolen or heavy cotton stockings and your feet will remain comfortably warm for three or four hours in the coldest weather.

PROPOSED REMOVAL OF GENERAL POPE.—It is currently reported that the President will shortly remove General Pope of the command of the Third Military District, and assign General George G. Meade to that position.

It is a sad, but indisputable truth, that the Republican party, despite its apparent strength, does not really occupy the position it shows in February.

It would be vain to deny that for the present the party have no money way. It would be equally useless to seek the cause of our weakness in any outward circumstances.

It is not because our party is so young that, before the election of '56, it can scarcely be said to have had an existence; for the younger we are the stronger and healthier we should be.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

It is not because there are no men in our ranks, for the best brain and soul of the country are with us. But it is because the majority of our adherents have never been as earnest as the Democratic masses.

It would have been well had we learned of our enemies, We should not then be resting for a moment on our laurels.

It is not because we are unwilling to practice what we preach. For we fear indeed that there are many who, although they talk of the equality and the inalienable rights of the black man, would still be unwilling to have him sit beside him in the jury box, or in the House of Representatives.

It is not because we profess to know men professing themselves Republicans, who say that they would no more eat with a negro at the same table, than they would sell their souls to Satan.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

JITTELS'S LIVING AGE.

It is an excellent magazine, published by Justice J. J. Jittels, and edited by J. J. Jittels, Jr. It is published in the month of January, and contains a large amount of original and interesting articles.

EVERY SATURDAY.

It is a sad, but indisputable truth, that the Republican party, despite its apparent strength, does not really occupy the position it shows in February.

It would be vain to deny that for the present the party have no money way. It would be equally useless to seek the cause of our weakness in any outward circumstances.

It is not because our party is so young that, before the election of '56, it can scarcely be said to have had an existence; for the younger we are the stronger and healthier we should be.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

It is not because there are no men in our ranks, for the best brain and soul of the country are with us. But it is because the majority of our adherents have never been as earnest as the Democratic masses.

It would have been well had we learned of our enemies, We should not then be resting for a moment on our laurels.

It is not because we are unwilling to practice what we preach. For we fear indeed that there are many who, although they talk of the equality and the inalienable rights of the black man, would still be unwilling to have him sit beside him in the jury box, or in the House of Representatives.

It is not because we profess to know men professing themselves Republicans, who say that they would no more eat with a negro at the same table, than they would sell their souls to Satan.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.

It is the best paper in the world, published by John W. & J. C. Smith, and edited by John W. & J. C. Smith. It is published in the month of January, and contains a large amount of original and interesting articles.

EVERY SATURDAY.

It is a sad, but indisputable truth, that the Republican party, despite its apparent strength, does not really occupy the position it shows in February.

It would be vain to deny that for the present the party have no money way. It would be equally useless to seek the cause of our weakness in any outward circumstances.

It is not because our party is so young that, before the election of '56, it can scarcely be said to have had an existence; for the younger we are the stronger and healthier we should be.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

It is not because there are no men in our ranks, for the best brain and soul of the country are with us. But it is because the majority of our adherents have never been as earnest as the Democratic masses.

It would have been well had we learned of our enemies, We should not then be resting for a moment on our laurels.

It is not because we are unwilling to practice what we preach. For we fear indeed that there are many who, although they talk of the equality and the inalienable rights of the black man, would still be unwilling to have him sit beside him in the jury box, or in the House of Representatives.

It is not because we profess to know men professing themselves Republicans, who say that they would no more eat with a negro at the same table, than they would sell their souls to Satan.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

NOTICE IN BANKRUPTCY.

It is a sad, but indisputable truth, that the Republican party, despite its apparent strength, does not really occupy the position it shows in February.

It would be vain to deny that for the present the party have no money way. It would be equally useless to seek the cause of our weakness in any outward circumstances.

It is not because our party is so young that, before the election of '56, it can scarcely be said to have had an existence; for the younger we are the stronger and healthier we should be.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

It is not because there are no men in our ranks, for the best brain and soul of the country are with us. But it is because the majority of our adherents have never been as earnest as the Democratic masses.

It would have been well had we learned of our enemies, We should not then be resting for a moment on our laurels.

It is not because we are unwilling to practice what we preach. For we fear indeed that there are many who, although they talk of the equality and the inalienable rights of the black man, would still be unwilling to have him sit beside him in the jury box, or in the House of Representatives.

It is not because we profess to know men professing themselves Republicans, who say that they would no more eat with a negro at the same table, than they would sell their souls to Satan.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.

It is not because the war enthusiasm, which for an instant drew the hearts of the whole people into our banners, has subsided, and men see things with colder eyes than before.