"Yes, Freddie, he has been dead many years." "Well, go on with the story."

"Is he dead, gradpa?"

"I arrived at last at the academy, and soon learned the routine of school duties. Every study came easy to me, save composition; somehow that was exceedingly difficult for me to write; and as the penalty of appearing in the recitation-room without one on the day they were required, subjected us to the punishment of rising earlier the next morning to write one, you may be assured I tried hard to fulfil the requirement. One morning, however, I failed to bring it; and Mr. Ledlaw, after obtaining the others, asked me for

"I thought Mr. Ledlaw was extremeby harsh and unreasonable; and as I foolishly imagined that I really could not write the composition, I resolved, during the afternoon, to run away in the night, thus escaping my bugbear. and I did up alf my clothes in a little bundle, and undressed myself, got into The time came for the boys to go to bed, bed, and made up my mind that as make my escape. About Washing Clothes. THE following from the Montreal Witness is worth the examination of nousekeepers:

The evening previous to washing, all the clothes should be gathered up and assorted; woolens, colored clothes, unbleached cottons, linens and fine dothes, into their separate bundles Except woolens and colored clothes, all other kinds should be put to soak over night, the very dirty part having soap rubbed on them. If you use a washing fluid, it is usually mixed in the soaking water; if you use no wash mixture, the next morning wring out the clothes, and proceed to wash them carefully through two warm lathers; then boil them in clean water briskly, but not nger than a halfan hour. Wash them out of boil, rinse through two waters. The last rinsing water should have a delicate tinge of blue, likewise a small quantity of starch for all cottons and linens; reserve those you wish stiffer for the last, and mix more starch in the water. Shirt bosoms and collars-in short, anything you wish very stiff, should be dipped in starch while dry.
