

Farmer's Department.

Importance of Fertilizing our Land. The only source of profit to the farmer is the fertility of his land.

Then there came a wind, so strong that it blew over the hills and was forced to turn and run after it; till, by the time he came back, she had done combing and curling her hair, and had put up again safely.

Then the wind came and blew away his hat; and off it flew a great way over the hills and far away, so that he had to run after it; and when he came back she had bound up her hair again, and all this she did so fast.

In the evening, after they came home, Curken went to the old king, and said, "I cannot have that strange girl to help me to keep the geese any longer."

And Curken went on telling the king what had happened upon the meadow where the geese fed; how his hat was blown away, and how he was forced to run after it, and to leave his flock of geese to themselves.

And soon came a grade of wind, and carried away Curken's hat, and away went Curken after it while the girl went on combing and curling her hair.

And when she called her ass, and asked her why she did so; but she burst into tears, and said, "That I must not tell you or any man, or I shall lose my life."

But the old king begged so hard, that she had to consent to tell him all the tale, from beginning to end, word for word. And it was very lucky for her that she did so, for when she had done the king ordered royal clothes to be put upon her, and gazed on her with wonder, she was so beautiful.

When they had eaten and drank, and were very merry the old king said he would tell them a tale. So he began, and told all the story of the princess, as if it was one that he had once heard; and he asked the true waiting-maid what she thought ought to be done to any one who would believe thus.
