How may good cows be raised with comparative certainly? We answer: first, by never using a common, or grade bull under any circumstances, if within 10 miles of a well bred one of any breed. By using a well bred bull one is sure of something definite and good; otherwise in his own coin. there is no certainty at all. Ayrshire The Man bitten by a Dog. bulls are almost sure to impart to their heifer calves a tendency to become deep milkers, Jersey bulls bring butter makers; Short horns, fine large cows, which, if allowed to come in young, well fed, and milk secretion especially excited, often make very deep milkers; Devon bulls, if from good milking stock as is true also with the Short-horns, will be the sires of good milch stock.

Opinions have varied in regard to what kind of cows will give the most milk in proportion to the food consumed, Graded Short-horns have had The Hart and the Vine. their advocates, and grade Ayrshires theirs. Few of those who sell milk as the most important article of farm produce have hitherto advocated keeping, still less kept, full-bloods as milk producers, Mr. J. M. Wells, one of the farmers alluded to, is now (January) milking 19 head, chiefly full-blood Ayrshires, and most of them of his own raising. His product of milk is 200 quarts per day. Mr. H. S. Such has been my experience, and yet in all the articles which I have read on the breeding of dairy stock, I have never seen it stated as the sine qua non of a first rate cow. But so well am I convinced of its impartance, that I would for his fool-hardiness; but the urchin give twice as much for a helfer of the same stock and age to calve in June, as read me the lecture afterwards." for one that would calve in winter. EXPERIMENTS have demonstrated, and analogy has shown, that the finest and best samples, of seed, continued for years, will improve the quality and quantity of the product. A better wheat is thus raised, even a variety may be established. On this principle, (in farm stock,) we have the different breeds of sheep, swine, poultry, etc. Experiments have not been made on the human species; but the same, no doubt, holds good there. Few hired men can be trusted to do things constantly, accordingly to directions. In the very cold weather there is a constant temptation to consult his own case rather than the comfort of the animals entrusted to his care. Feed and water regularly, and shelter all cattle in barns or sheds. Pine boards are cheaper than hay or grain. Keep salt within reach of horses, cattle and sheep. A large lump of rock salt is best for this purpose. If they can lick when they please, they will not take it in excess. Attend to give the animals the benefit of the sun for a while on clear days. Keep all animals in a thriving condition.

He arrived true to his appointment, and the dinner was ordered forthwith; but when it was served up, he found to his dismay that ed vessel, down which the Stork readily thrust her long neck and bill, while he was obliged to content himself with licking the neck of the jar. Unable to satisfy his hunger, he retired with as good a grace as he could, observing that he could hardly find fault with his entertainer, who had paid him back

A Man who had been bitten by a Dog, was going about asking who could cure him. One that met him said, "Sir, is you would be cured, take a bit of bread dip it in the blood of the wound, and give it to the dog that bit you." The Man smiled and said, "If I were to follow your advice, I should be bitteh by all the dogs in the city."

A HART pursued by hunters concealed himself among the branches of a Vine. The hunters passed by without discovering him, and when he thought that all was safe, he began browsing up on the leaves that had concealed him But one of the hunters attracted by the rustling, turned round, and guessing that their prey was there, shot into the bushes and killed him. As he was dying, he groaned out these words: "I suffer justly for my ingratitude, who could not forbear injuring the Vine that

The Boy bathing.

A Boy was bathing in a river, and, getting out of his depth, was on the point of sinking, when he saw a wayfarer coming by, to whom he called out for help with all his might and main. The Man began to read the Boy a lecture cried out, "O, save me now sir! and

An Astronomer used to walk out eve ry night to gaze upon the stars. It happened one night that, as he was wandering in the outskirts of the city, with his whole thoughts rapt up in the skies, he fell into a well.
