The President's Message

This important document reached us late for publication in this week's issue...

The President's message to Congress on Wednesday at one o'clock p.m. referring to the non-representation of Virginia, Mississippi, and Texas in Congress...

A fair trial, he says, the reconstruction act have substantially failed, and provisions in its results, and other reasons, no good reason why they should remain on the statute books...

He recommends that the act of March 2, 1867, depriving the President of power to issue military orders except through army officers, be repealed...

He makes but slight reference to the negotiations for the settlement of the Alabama claims...
