TI NORMAL SCHOOL -- A few days nore had the pleasure of ambing a horgh inspection of this flux strucare der the guidance of Prof. Henry carv the Principal, and were both atoned and delighted at the pro-resellch has been made floor-og pearly all laid, the excler is onlished, and the Town wing in e rth story is lathed ready for plasing; a considerable amount of athi has also been done on the lower fles. Some few figures may give an fet o'the immense amount of work highs been done. The flooring took officet " lumber, the lumber in the of ston freed up 100,000 feet, and Blid and bear are ill at case, a studding of the whole . The glamb-

And does things on the sly. So all began to listen. And the Kitten ope'd her eyes, And suned around the circle With an introcent surprise, The cimble ericket ran, And in the general silence The story thus began. On a dark and cloudy night, With a howling north-east storm, Not a star to give me light, Nor a cloak to keep me warm, Not a path to guide my feet To Saint Nicholas' retreat. Up the dark and lone-one ravine, Step by step I picked my way, By a little marmaring raplet I had often tracked by day,

And which lod to Santa Claus'.

For this was the only time

And It was on Friday, too,

I had brand my Grand Pa say.

In the whale revolving year,

His deep hidden mountain home

To a morfal would appear,

"I was the night of Halloween,

Saildest day of all the seven.

And the moon was in the wane,

And the hour beyond eleven!

Troops of fairles dance and sing.

Charm the mortal to the ring :

Wigneds conjure visions dire,

Warlocks revel in the tempest,

Witches ride upon the broomstick,

Every moment growing higher,

heard in upper air,

Fenriul night! on every bliside

And with sound of marry music

Nighton which strange things are seen;

So be ordered up some wine, Calles and nots and apples too, And as well-bred people do. Drink, said he, and eat your fill, For the night is damp and chill; And there's many a weary infle Of rock and raving to be strode, E'ec you reach the little stile So we had a merry chat, Talked of this and then of that; But at last the clock struck two, And I knew it would not do To be seen in morning chiff, On Old Santa Claus! hill. So I buttoned up my coat

Closs around my breast and th

Browing cap about my cars,

Turned to bid them all

So she handed me a chair, Close beside the chimney fire. And of all the men and maidens In the town she did inquire: Astrodage who were getting married. What the winter fashions were, Calling for a full description Of the modern female wear. Flounces, nots, hoopskir is and laces, She could understand them all. But I had a dreadful trouble To explain the "waterfall ." And when to another feature The description did extend, And I triod to give a notion Of a full grown "Gracian Bendy" White Old Santa Claus was sitting

With his pipe between his teeth, And around his head was curling From its bowl a hearteous wreath. One eve shut, and P other winking moto pur ment. Kindly at me shrough the smoke ; And I am sure that he was thinking DMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

What a most tromendous loke I was telling the old lady: But I told him it was true, And no loke at all of mine: But he only winked the more, Rolling o'er the parlor floor, Laughing till his sides were sore,

Much to talk he did incline,

Leading to the Bloomsburg road.
