Their love was the the lava flood that burns in Etm's Preset of flame Near the end of a dark autumn-day, not many grears ago, a young couple, re-turning from their bridal tour, arrived by steamer at the old city of Norfolk; and, taking a back, drove directly to the best ind.

The gentleman registered himself and his party as Mr. and Mrs. Lyon Berners, of Black Hall, Virginia, and two ser-wants.

"We shall need a private parlor and chamber communicating for our own use, and a couple of bedrooms for our gervants," said Mr. Berners, as he handdest his nat and cane to the bowing days, dear Lyon," said the little lady, smilling up in his eyes. "You love me so much, dear Lyon! You love me so much! Yet not bee much either! for oh! she muttered in a long, deep, shuddering tone.

"Why, Sybil, my wife—you beautiful and creature! You are a true daughter of your house! A Berners of the burning heart! A Berners of whom it has been said, that it is almost as fatal to be loved as to be hated by—"

Subleady in the midst of their converse they heard the sound of weeping—low, deep, heart-broken weeping.

Isoth passed, looked at each other, and listened.

The sound seemed to come from a room on the opposite side of the passage to their own apartment.

"What is that?" inquired Sybil;looking up to her husband's face.

"It seems to be some woman in distress," answered Lyon.

"Oh! see what it is, dear, will you?" if to antreated Sybil.

that sorrow should exist in this world at all.

But if she could have foreseen the woe that was to come to herself, to her husband, and to the object of her sympathy, she would have held Lyon back, as with the grip of fate, from the mission on which she now sent him.

For the weeper was a beautiful woman—a deserted wife—named Rosa Blondelle, who, although but a few days landed from the vessel which had brought her from Europe, had been robbed of her jewels and money by her husband, and then left to her fate in that Norfolk hotel.

Sybil was deeply moved by this lady's story, and insisted on taking Mrs. Blondelle home with her toblack Hall, and Mr. Berners gave his assent to her wishes.

But be ore they got ready to set out on their journey, Sybil bitterly repented of the arrangement, Mrs. Blondelle, was so eachantingly lovely, that Mr. Berners at once began to yield to her charms, and Sybil, for the first time, saw him pay the homage of admiration to other beauty than her own.

This kindled the fires of jealousy in her heart, and by the time they reached light the fires and because of the content of the arrangement, Mrs. Blondelle, who had so you please. But this I we wishes.

And now, at length, Lyon Berners spoke again.

This kindled the fires of jealousy in her wishes and brought her from the room. This kindled the fires of jealousy in her wishes are the first ime, leave the house you must leave the house you. They must do not your life with less remorse than ever I set were lifting her from her mattress. Her your form again!"

She tried to cry out in her agony of they leave the never 1 set were lifting her were lifting her your life with leave and over 1 set her heart, and by the time they reached Black Hall, those fires had became fanned into an inextinguishable readiness.

One day while she was absent at Blackville, making purchases, Lyon and Rosa became so absorbed in one another, as to become oblivious of the entry of Mrs. Winterose, the old housekeeper, who found them sitting closely side by side, her hand clasped in his. On Sybil's return, the old housekeeper described this seeme to her, with many exaggerations. The revelation seemed to freeze Sybil into ice.

Slack Hall, the abode of Mrand Mrs. Thers, was a palatial old Virginia maion, situated in the heart of the mistor, was a palatial old Virginia maion, situated in the heart of the mistor. It had been in the Berner's family for generations, it was renowned for theseones of gay-and hospitality which had transpled geath its roof.

If s. Berner's, the last of her race, to vent to the emotions of her restless, our heart, resolved to reinaugurate festivities of the olden time, and for the purpose announced a misk ball for ensuing Alf-Hallow Eve, and at sot about getting all things in diness.

In diness.

The revelation seemed to freeze Sybi' into ice.

"Oh my heart! my heart!" she moaned, turning deadly pale. And then, after a long silence, she bitterly added. "Deceived! Betrayed! Scorned! Laughed at! Well, well?" she continued, nodding grimly; "well, well, since deceit is the fashion of the day, I too will be in the fashion; I too will wear a mask of smiles! But behind that misk, I will watch!—Oh, how I will watch! Mot at my fancy-bail alone will I play a part, but before it, and perhaps, after &! None shall ever know how I watch, what I see, until I descend with the fell swoop of the eagle. And henceforth let me remember that I am a daughter of the house of Berners, who never falled a friend or spared a foe. And oh, let the spirit of my fathers support me, for I must ENDUBE until I can AVENGE!"

And oh! could those triflers with sacred love—those wanderers on the brink of a fearful abyss—have seen the look of her face then, they would have fled from each other forever, rather than to have dared the despera-ion of her roused soul.

But they saw nothing, knew nothing, suspected nothing!

And thus all the three drifted toward the awful brink of ruin.

"Oh, anything you please, so that it is nice and neatly served," said Mr. Berars, with a slightly impatient wave of his hand as if he would have been rid of his obsequious host.

"Ah ah! anything I please! It is may to see what alls him. He lives upto love just now; but he'll care more about his bill of hare a few weeks hence," chuckled the landlord, as he left the public parlor to execute his guest's orders.

As each couple passed into the supper room, they took off their masks, and handed them to attendants, placed for that purpose to the right and left of the door. Thus, when the company filled the room, every face was shown, but "Death" was nowhere to be seen.

At last the party broke up. Only a few of the guests remained all night. These were shown to their rooms, and few of the guests remained all night. These were shown to their rooms, and the others having gone, as fale would have it, Mrs. Blendelle went into the little reception parlor, to meet Mr. Berners, who assured her that henceforth he could never extend to her more than a brother's affection.

"Then give me a brother's kiss," she sighed. "That is not much to ask, and I have no one to kiss me now. So give me a brother's kiss, and let me go," she pleaded, plaintively.

He hesitated for a moment, and then bending over her, he said:

It was the last as well as the first: for at the meeting of their lips they were stricken assunder as by the fall of a thunderbalt!

I leave it too, and leave it for ever!"
If Lyon Berners really meant this, or thought to bring his fiery-hearted wife to terms by the threat, he was mistaken in her character.
"Oh, go!" she answered, bitterly—"go as soon as you like, Lyon Berners. Good-night, and —good-bye," she said and with a wave of her hand she passed from the room.

And Sybil swooned with horror!
When Sybil recovered from her death-like swoon, she found herself in a spacious cavern of such exceeding beauty and splendor, that for an instant she lost sight of her terrors in her astonishment and admiration, and then her eyes settled upon a figure who seemed the sole occupant of the place.

This was a young girl, who, with her red cloak thrown mat-like on the moss, was seated upon it cross-legged in the Turkish fashion. Her elfin face, her malign eyes, her wild, black hair and pleturesque costume, were all so in keeping with the aspect of the place, that one might have deemed her the spirit of the cavern.

The two women looked at each other in silence for perhaps half a minute; and then Sybil spoke:

"What place is this? Who are you? Why am I brought hither?"

"One question at a time," answered the girl. "What place his is concerns you little; I am a gipsy, and my name is Gentiliska; why you are brought here, ah! that concerns you very much! It concerns your liberty, and perhaps your life."

"I do not believe it! You have had me torn away from my husband! Where is he now?" haughtily demanded Mrs. Berners.

"He is likely in the hands of the constables, who are by this time in possession of the Haunted Chapel. But fear nothing! Him they will release again, for they have no right to detain him; but you they would have kept, if they had caught you. The constables were coming there for us, but they would have found you had we not brought you away with us. That was my doing. I made your removal the condition of my silence."

"But when will you communicate with my husband, to releve his dreadful suspense?"

"As soon as it shall be safe to do so. Our first care must be our own safety, but our second will be yours."

Sybil said no more at the more.

"As soon as it shall be sate to do so. Our first care must be our own safety, but our second will be yours."

Then pointing to a bed of moss and recommending her guest to lie down and seek repose, the gipsy girl glided away through the labyrinth of caves and was lost to sight and hearing.

Sybil's first impulse was to start up and run after her hostess, but she restrained herself, and sank half fainting upon the heap of moss.

There was but a faint sparkling of light in the cave, coming from a crevice in the roof through which the moonlight entered.

"Seek repose," had been the advice

THE HAUNTED CHAPEL.

The Haunted Chapel to which Mr. and Mrs. Berners were going was in a dark and lonely gorge on the other side of the mountain.

They arrived safely at the old ruin, where in the course of the day they were joined by Mrs. Berners' faithful servant Joe, whose affection for his mistress had led him to play the spy, and find out where she was going, and secretly follow her with provisions and means for making her somewhat comfortable.

The fugitives felt so depressed, that even the cheerful supper supplied by Joe could not relieve them of the overshadowing gloom which had settled on their hearts. A strange drowsiness soon oppressed them, and they sunk into a deep sleep, as though they had been drugged with some powerful uarbent of the caver and nearly filled it up.
