He glanced furtively around, then with a queer smile the old hunter took up his rifle from the bottom of the wagon, and raising it to his shoulder, drew a slight on the Colonel's horse.

"Beautiful!" muttered Drake, lowering his rifle with the air of a man resisting a powerful temptation. "I could drop old Roan so easy!"

"Shoot," suggested Sam Barston, who loved fun in any shape. "No, no, 'twouldn't do," said the old hunter, glancing cautiously around him again.

"I won't tell," said Sam. "I won't shoot this time any way, for not to do. The horse is too high. If he was fifty rods off, instead of twelve, so there'd be a bare possibility of mistaking him for a deer, I'd let fly. As it is, I'd give the Colonel five dollars for a shot."

At that moment the Colonel himself stepped from behind a big oak, not half a dozen paces distant, and stood before Mr. Drake.

"Well, why don't you shoot?" "The old man stammered in confusion: 'That you, Colonel? I—I was tempted to, I declare! And as I said, I'll give a V for one ball!'"

"Drake felt X, and it's a bargain!" "Drake felt of his rifle, and looked at old Roan."

"How much is the loss worth?" he muttered in Sam's ear. "About fifty."
