

THE YOUNG FOLKS.

The Frog Prince.

In the olden time, when wishing was having, there lived a King, whose daughters were all beautiful; but the youngest was so exceedingly beautiful...

Near the castle of this King was a large and gloomy forest, and in the midst stood an old lime-tree, beneath whose branches played a little fountain...

Now, one day it happened, that this golden ball, when the King's daughter threw it into the air, did not fall down into her hand, but on the grass...

Twice afterwards on the journey there was the same noise, and each time the Prince thought that it had given way; but it was only the breaking of the bands which bound the heart of the trusty Henry...

FARMER'S COLUMN.

Raise Sheep—Eat Mutton.

Good mutton, well-fattened and neatly butchered, is the most wholesome, nutritious and cheapest of meats.

Every farmer should have a few long-wooled Cotswet sheep, at least—Cotswold or Leicester. They are little trouble, and will keep fat on a common cow...

"Oh, I will promise you all," said she, "if you will only get me my ball."

The Frog answered, "Dresses, or jewels, or golden crown, are not for me; but if you will love me, and let me be your companion and playfellow, and sit at your table, and eat from your little golden plate, and drink out of your cup, and sleep in your little bed—if you will promise me all these, then will I dive down and fetch up your golden ball."

"What will you give me for my ball?" said she. "My dresses, my pearls and jewels, or the golden crown which I wear?"

The Frog answered, "Dresses, or jewels, or golden crown, are not for me; but if you will love me, and let me be your companion and playfellow, and sit at your table, and eat from your little golden plate, and drink out of your cup, and sleep in your little bed—if you will promise me all these, then will I dive down and fetch up your golden ball."

"Oh, I will promise you all," said she, "if you will only get me my ball."

But she thought to herself, "What is the silly Frog chattering about? Let him remain in the water with his curls; he cannot talk in society."

But the Frog, as soon as he had received her promise, drew his head under the water and dived down. Presently he swam up again with the ball in his mouth, and threw it to the grass. The King's daughter was full of joy when she again saw her beautiful plaything; and, taking it up, she ran off immediately. "Stop! Stop!" cried the Frog; "take me with thee. I cannot run as you canst."

But all his croaking was useless; although it was loud enough, the King's daughter did not hear it, but, hastening home, soon forgot the poor Frog, who was obliged to leap back into the fountain.

The next day when the King's daughter was sitting at the table with her father and all his courtiers, and was eating from her own little golden plate, something was heard coming up the marble stairs, splash-splash, splash-splash; and when it arrived at the top, it knocked at the door, and a voice said, "Open the door, thou youngest daughter of the King!" So she rose and went to see who it was that called her; but when she opened the door and caught sight of the Frog, she shut it again with great vengeance, and sat down at the table, looking very pale.

But the King perceived that her heart was beating violently, and asked her whether it was a giant who had come to fetch her away who stood at the door. "Oh, no!" answered she; "it is no giant, but an ugly Frog."

"What does the Frog want with you?" said the King.

"Oh, dear father, when I was sitting yesterday playing by the fountain, my golden ball fell into the water, and this Frog fetched it up again because I cried so much; but first, I must tell you, he pressed me so much, that I promised him he should be my companion. I never thought that he could come out of the water, but somehow he has jumped out, and now he wants to come in here."

At that moment there was another knock, and a voice said,—"King's daughter, youngest, Open the door, Open the door, At the fountain so clear, 'Tis the lime-tree's shadow 'Tis the King's daughter, youngest, Open the door!"

Then the King said, "What you have promised, that you must perform; go and let him in." So the King's daughter went and opened the door, and the Frog hopped in after her right up to her chair and as soon as she was seated, the Frog said, "Take me up;" but she hesitated so long that at last the King ordered her to obey. And as soon as the Frog sat on the chair he jumped on to the table and said, "Now push thy plate near me, that we may eat together. Any unwillingly. The Frog seemed to relish his dinner much, but every bit that the King's daughter ate nearly choked her, till at last the Frog said, "I have satisfied my hunger and feel very tired; wilt thou carry me upstairs now into thy chamber, and make thy bed ready that we may sleep together?" At this speech the King's daughter began to cry, for she was afraid of the cold Frog, and dared not touch him; and besides, he actually wanted to sleep in her own beautiful, clean bed.

But her tears only made the King very angry, and he said, "He who helped me to sleep for so long, but who could not now be despised!" So she took the Frog up with two fingers, and put him in a corner of her chamber. But as she lay in her bed, he crept up to it, "I am so very tired that I shall sleep well; do take me up or I will tell thy father." This speech put the King's daughter in a terrible passion, and catching the Frog up, she threw him with all her strength against the wall, saying, "Now, will you be quiet, you ugly Frog!"

But as he fell he was changed from a frog into a handsome Prince with beautiful eyes, who after a little while began toasting her father's consent, her dear companion and betrothed. Then
