Indian Summer.

lust after the death of the flowers, And before they are buried in snow, There comes a festival season, When nature is all aglow— Aglow with a mystical spiendor That rivals the brightness of Spring glow with a beauty more tender Than aught which fair summer could bring, ome spirit akin to the rainbow Then borrows its magical dyes, And manties the far spreading landscape In bucs that bewilder the eyes. The Sun from his cloud-pillowed chamber Smiles soft on a vision so gay, And dreams that his favorite children The flowers, have not yet passed away. There's luminous mist on the mountains,

A light, szure baze in the air, As if angels while heavenward soaring, Had left their bright robes floating there; The breeze is so soft, so care From some happy spirit above. These days so serene and so charming. Awaken a dreamy delight-

A fromulous, tearing dengat—
A fromulous, tearing enjoyment,
Like soft strains of music at night;
We know they are fading and fleeting,
That quickly, too quickly, they'll end,
And we watch them with yearning affection As at parting we watch a dear friend. Oh! beautiful Indian Summer! Thou favorite child of the year. Thou darling, whom Nature enriches With gifts and adornments so dear! low fain would we woo thee to linger On mountain and meadow awhile

For our hearts, like the sweet haunts of Nature Rejoice and grow young in thy smile. Not alone to the sad fields of Autuson Dost thou a lost brightness restore, But thou bringst a world-weary spirit Sweet dreams to its childhood once more Thy loviness fills us with memories Of all that was brightest and hest-Thy peace and serenity offer
A foretaste of heavenly rest.

How to Woo and Win.

"Would you play the manly lover?" Said a graybeard to his son, *List, my lad, while I discover How a maiden should be won.

"Woo her not with boostful phrases Lest you teach her lip to sheer; Still a suitor's warmest praises In his conduct should appear.

"Woo her not with senseless sighing; Maidens love a laughing eye; Teli her not that you are dying, Lest she, mocking, bid you die "Woo her not with weakly whining O'er your poverty of petf. Lest she answer by declining Both your sorrows-and yourself! "Woo her with a manly wooing; Giving hostages to Fate, All the hearts devotion showing By its strength to work and wait.

"Woo her not with idle pratile Whom you fain would make your wife; But with proofs that in life's battle You are equal to the strife. "Like the knight whose simple suing

Won the lady (says the tale,)
When despite their wordly wooding. All the rest were doomed to fail :-'Lady,' quoth the bold Knight Errant. 'Brief the story I shall tell;
'I would wed thee; here's the warrant.
'I shall love and serve thee well!'

"And behold! his dexter fingers. All the gold the twain can need!"

I hold that Christian grace abounds Where charity is seen : that, when We climb to heaven, 'tis on the rounds Of love to men,

I hold all else, named piety, A selfish scheme, a vain pretence Where centre is not, can there be Circumference? This I moreover hold, and dare Affirm where'er my rhyme may go Whatever things be sweet or fair, Love makes them so-That charm to rest the nestling b)rd; Or that sweet confidence of sights, And blushes without word;

Whether the dazzling and the flush Of softly sumptuous garden bower Or by some cabin door or bush

Of ragged flowers. 'Tis not the white phylactery Nor stubborn fast, nor stated prayers. That makes us saints; we judge the tree By what it bears.

From work on theologic trust, I know the blood about his heart Is ary as dust,

The Bridal.

BY A DECIDEDLY CONFIRMED BATCHELOR.

Not a laugh was heard, not a joyous note As our friend to the bridal we hurried; Not a wit discharged his farewell shot As the bachelor went to be married. We married him quickly to save his fright, Our heads from the sad sight turning;

And we sighed as we stood by the lamp's di To think that he was no more discerning

To think that a bachelor free and bright, And shy of the sex as we found him, should there at the alter, at dead of night He caught in the snare that bound him. Few and short were the words we said.

slowly and sadly we marched him down From the first to the lowermost story; and we never have heard or seen the poor man Whom we left alone in his glory,

This Life is What We Make It.

And rarer of the bad ones And sing about our happy days, And not about the sad ones. We were not made to fret and sigh And when grief sleeps to wake: This life is what we make it Let's find the sunny side of men

Or we believers in A;
A light there is in every soul
That takes the pain to win it. Oh! there's a slumbering good in all, And we, perchance, may wake it; Our hands contain the magic wand. This life is what we make it. RED CLOUD.

The King of the Plains Ashamed of his Great Father, the President—He Ac-cuses Him of Lying.

The commission appointed by the President to visit the Sioux and Cheyenne Indians reached Fort Laramic Washington Territory, on the 21st of September, where they were obliged to remain-awaiting the pleasure of his Royal Highness, Red Cloud-until the evening of the 4th lost,, when, the head chiefs of those nations having arrived, measures were taken to have the Council meet.

RED CLOUD'S PRAYER AND SPEECH. Red Cloud, after offering a prayer in which all the Indians joined, spoke as "You are my friends, and I want you to listen to my words. They are the same I told the Great Father, and I wish you to carry them back to him Look at me. These men are all Ogallalas, my nation. They are for friendship. That is why we are here to-day When I went to Washington I saw great many chiefs. I told them what I meant. I still mean it, I do not change. I hold my Great Father's When I came back I promised to stop all war parties. When I got back I talked to my young men, and I am glad to say they listened to and obeyed my orders. My Great Father tells me that it would be many yearsten, twenty or thirty-before white men would pass through my country, and I told it to my young men. Before six months had passed they went through my land, thus shaming me before my people. It was the Cheyenne party. Governor Campbell knew of it, yet nobody stopped them."

Mr. Brunset-The Great Father don't desire white men to pass by the way of Bridger, but wanted to use this road. only traveling some thirty miles along the north bank of the Platte, and then recrossing to this side. Red Cloud-I do not so understand it The Great Father told me that Fort Fetterman was there to watch my interests as well as his. He has lied to me. This road they have been using for some fifty five years, and it has ruined us, but we have received no pay for it. At all our councils they never said anything about the read, but gave us all north of the Platte-the Great Spirit heard it. If I had three or four Great Father, but as I only have this piece I think he should let me live in peace on it. The Great Father has houses filled with gold stolen from my lands. I want him to do us justice. My friends, look at us; we are near to the sunset; we used to be at the sunrise. I have heart, brain and sense, Father sends men to spill blood. While his people he did not mind us; this is Father's fault; he killed my young stopped. When I came back from Washington I was glad. You were present at the council in Washington when I spoke these words. I still hold to them. Look all around this post, and you see bones-the bones of my people. I told the Great Father that I wanted two traders, as in olden times. I want my traders ten miles above here not in my own country. I want to know about the presents you have brought here for me.

Mr. Brunot-If you want pay for it that goods were sent to him, but he did Great Father, and others will be furnished. I will now tell you what I have brought you-blankets, muslin, calleo, blue and red cloth, shirts, hats, axes, butcher knives, tobacco and ket-

The Uhlans. What the Cossack was to an earlier eneration of Frenchmen the Uhlan is to their descendants. Mysterious in name and ubiquitous in his movements the blue and yellow horseman, with the heavy revolver in his belt, causes at once bewilderment and alarm. Uhla is the Polish word for lancer, and is said to be derived from a Tartar root, signifying brave, a vestige perhaps of Mongolian invasions. But the Prussian lancer has nothing non Germanic about him but his name, He is in fact a big Teuton, cool, hardy, ntelligent, and good-humored, the beautdeal of a modern light-cavalryman. The officers speak both French and German, and are Well acquainted with the topography of the country. When the armies are in the front and on either flank, they mask the movements of their own forces while they pick up all possible information about the enemy. They tear up railways, cut telegraph-wires, and act as foragers for the main force. Mounted on wiry horses, mostly from the eastern provinces, and broken into small detachments, they are often left for days together to their own resources. The offleer in command acts on his own responsibility. If he succeeds he is employed again, and may hope for speedy promotion. If he fails, he is at once recalled, and serves for the rest of the campaign with the main body of the

The tales told of the enterprise and daring developed under the system are almost fabulous. Five hundred of these Uhlans covered the whole line of the frontier during the anxious fortnight in which the German forces were being mobilized, and succeeded in persuading the French marshals that they were the advanced guard of a large force. A party of five took tranquil possession of the town of Chalons, awing the inhabitants with their revolvers and coolly smoking their pipes while they issued orders to prepare supplies for the troops which were on their way. At Haguenau, Nancy, Barle-Duc, resistance was in like manner crushed by sheer audacity. At once bold and wary, reckless of their lives, but careful, to avoid unnecessary encounters, they are the eyes of the army; and the marvelous precision with which the operations of the campaign has been conducted is due, in great measure, to the active in-

The Mormons. Many people turn their thoughts toward Salt Lake when the subject of monism is mentioned, and probably the bulk of that sect is located in the locality named. But it is nevertheless true that the church of Latter Day Saints has many arms, one of which rests upon English soil. At a mormon conference, held at Hoxton, England, not long ago, the report read stated a constant growth of membership, and one of the elders anounced, with pardonable unction, that he had hope that England would be "saved." Another, John Jacques by name, solemnly announced that the destruction of France was in the nature of a Judgment upon its people, because they relected mormonism. He hinted that other nations might reap similarly should they reject the revelations of Joe Smith much longer. We hope Elder John Jacques will go out to China with the next cargo of opium and try his elequence upon the "heathen Chinee." A few martyrs, more or les, would be a decided advantage to mormonism in its day of schism, and the Chinese appear just at present to be in the humor for making minee meat of everybody who will not fall down and

Sir Thomas Bozely said that he never knew of a more arrogant assumption than the interference of Napoleon with Spain. Mr. Jacob Bright deprecated the war because neutral nations could think of nothing else. 6.
