BLOOMSBURG, PA. Friday Morning, Nov. 25, 1870.

IF any views we express in the Co-LUMBIAN are not in accord with those of our readers, the latter are welcome to controvert them in our columns, without other limitation than that they must be written out in a fair hand, be carefully considered, broached in clear, concise and respectful language, and be consistent with good morality and orthodox Democratic sentiment. Expressions of views for the public good, on any legitimate subject, are also invited.

Grant.

It cannot have escaped the recollec tion of the reading and listening public that during the last Presidential campaign, it was persistently averred that General GRANT was in no way fitted for the office of President of the United States; that neither his mental, moral nor educational standard came up to the requirements of the place ; that he had no political knowledge or experience, that all his practice in the public affairs was merely military, and as a consequence his whole administration of the civil affairs of the Government, would be on that basis and utterly destructive of the supremacy of the law.

If we were to go into an examination of the conduct of our foreign affairs, we should find a much similar catalogue of crimes and blunders. In every case in which it was possible to send a wrong man, or to do a wrong thing, that man has been sent and that thing has been done. We have truckled to England, and then tried to regain valor by bullying Cuba; we have purchased territory from Russia and tried to steal it from Spain ; in the European war the Presideal has been first neutral, next for Prussia and now seems to be for France; while Cuban patriots, women and children are being butchered, and Irish political prisoners languish in dungeons, refused the sympathy and assistance of the United States Government. But the official career of General GRANT presents a case that is peculiar. He stands charged not so much with unfaithfulness to his party, as official misconduct and personal meanness; and these charges are so well established, so universally believed and so freely enlarged upon, that the organs of his own party even, which appeak in his favor or attempt his vindi-cation, are the exception.
