GENERAL REMARKS.

The cheerful aspect of national affairs is a subject for congratulation. A pro-dent and patriotic administration has given to the country the substantial fruition of the victories obtained in the fruition of the victories obtained in the late struggle for freedom and the Re-public. The dissevered States have been restored to the Union; peace reigns triumphant through all our dominions; the national credit is established beyond the possibility of successful assault, and returning prosperity abounds in every State and department of the grovern-ment ment. The doctrine of free trade, so bene-The doctrine of free trade, so bene-ficial to foreign interests and so inimical to American industry, if carried out to its legitimate results, would soon cause American labor to be absolutely im-poverished, reduce the free and happy interference with the sovereign rights poverished, reduce the free and happy millions of toilers to the degraded condition of the down-trodden population of Europe, and capital would no longer seek enterprises thus rendered unremuseek enterprises thus rendered unremu-nerative. Protection to our products and manufactures, when rightly viewed, is protection to labor against competi-tion from abroad. Labor in the United States commands higher wages than in any other country. Consequently our working men are the more elevated. Labor is the foundation of individual and national wealth and those patients and national wealth, and those nations and national wealth, and those nations that have most thoroughly protected it from foreign competition have been most prosperous. During the late war the talismanic influences of protection ... our home industries, and upon the labor and capital invested, were obvious in developing and raising them from their paralized condition to the sub-stantial prosperity which has since per-vaded the country. desired that universal peace, amity, and national fellowship and brotherhood should again prevail throughout our country. And the time is, I trust, close at hand, when this grand and perfect consummation will be effected by uni-versal amnesty. It would efface the lingering distinctions which are foster-ed by punishment of the very few for crimes in which very many participa-ted, and remove the last pretext for fostility against a government whose magnanimity is the crowning glory of its power. It will accord with enligh-tende and progressive civilization, and harmonize with the tested might and grandeur of free institutions. It will present, too, the noblest government of the world's history as impregnable and indissoluble, because founded, without distinction, class, birth or circumstan-ces, upon the virtue and intelligence of all its people. The Governor's Message came down upon the Republicans like a thousand of bricks. The Governor's ideas are sound on the financial question and much more practical than Secretary Bour-WELL'S. He proposes to pay off some eight millions of the State debt, which will become due by the 1st of July, 1872.

with the assets of the Sinking Fund, which will reduce the debt down to the very managable amount of $21,500,000. The Legislature is now directly and pointedly called upon to apply the Sinking Fund to its Constitutional use. The people will now see if any of their Representatives will dare to join in any scheme of spoliation similar to the one of last session which was arrested by the Governor's veto. That the attempt will be made, I grieve to say, I have little doubt. Those members who join in this nefarious transaction, can only appear before the public in the charatter of bribed conspirators. After they shall have robbed by their act, the Treasury of the millions immediately required to pay the matured debts of the Commonwealth, they may still find an Insuperable obstacle where they least expect to find one. At any rate, as sure as there is an inexorable retributive justice which, sooffer or later, overtakes every evil doer, the time will come when these conspirators shall appear before the stern tribunal of their own conscience, which they foolishly believe to be dead in their wicked hearts. In the recommendation of a Conven tion to amend the present Constitution. the Governor evidently favors the introduction of the free vote or minority representation as a new clause in the Constitution.
