BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday Morning, Feb. 3, 1871.

Next Governor.

We have no objections to newspapers making Governors. It is an innocent employment and no harm can come from it, they say. But we do object to the business of making great men out of small material. Editors have a fashion of that and it is no credit to them. We have just now a profusion of minnie candidates for Governor-a genus of political polywog with brass and others should be ramed. greenbacks enough to induce some newspaper man to nominate him for Governor, and interested "friends" enough to inveigle some county committee or convention into nominating him. For the "honor," they say, which given subject, and many more than one M. G.) himself, and that it was a paipaof itself will harm nobody-only make a little great man out of small material. But that business has become so common, and so disreputable, that proper men begin to refuse their names even for high public position. Therein lies the evil, and that is why the strutting vagabonds we refer to should have no place in the newspapers.

In view of the results of the last Gubernatorial nomination and of the palpable disaster that followed, it was hoped that there would be no difference of opinion as to who should be the next any, yet almost every Democratic paper we read has a "puff" for some embryo aspirant for notoriety-a foetus Governor-whose loftlest ambition is sated when he can coax, or bribe, or fool an editor into naming him for a place that ought only to be spoken of in connec tion with honorable and intellectual mea. For one we protest against this belittleing business

The duties of this office are peculiar, and no party ought to succeed in the election that does not nominate a proper candidate to fill it. It is not a place for more politicians, is of no political advantage, and is far from being a sine cure if the duties be properly discharged. An able and industrious man, of unbending honesty and determination, is required. He ought to be well press the discharge of the committee versed in all the affairs of State, familconstantly unless prompt action be taken by it. iar with business generally, well ac-

CONGRESSMAN BUTLEE has been as quitted of the charge of forging pension receipts by a Washington court. That he endorsed somebody else's name upon a paper was not denied, but he succeeded in proving by a witness that he was Attorney for the party and had authority to endorse. That the widow whose name was forged was not produced as witness, may seem strange to those not familiar with the manner in which cases are often fixed up in corrupt courts, es pecially those of the district of Columbia, which carry their politics into causes with all the vehemence of stump campaigns. Playing Congressman is no doubt much more agreeable than serving the people in a penitentiary.
