These gentry are not yet quite dead. At least the belief in them still lingers n some country districts; while in Southeastern Europe and Southwestern Asia the credence prevails among whole The most detailed vampire storie belong to the Danubian and Greek countries. Tournefort describes a scene that came under his personal notice in Greece. A peasant of Mycone was mur-dered in the field in the year 1701. He had been a man of quarrelsome, ill-natured disposition : just the sort of man, according to the current belief of the peasantry, to be haunted by vampires after death. Two days after his burial, it was noised about that he had been seen to walk in the night with great haste, overturning people's goods, put ting out their lights, pinching them and playing them strange pranks. The rumor was so often repeated that at length the priests avowed their belief in its truth. Masses were said in the chapels, and eeremonies were performed, having for their object to drive out the vampire that inhabited the dead man. On the tenth day after the burial, a mass was said, the body was disinterred and the heart taken out. Frankincense was burned to ward off infection; but the bystanders insisted on the smoke of omething of the kind has occupied the frankincense being a direct emanation from the dead body,-a sure sign, the present generation. In 1854 The according to popular belief, of vampir-Times gave an extract from an Amerii-m. They burned the heart on the ca shore, the conventional way of getcan newspaper, the Norwich Courier, concerning an event that had just oc ting rid of vampires. Positive statements went the round of the village that curred. Horace Bry, of Griswold, died the dead man was still up to all kinds of mischief, beating people in the children afterwards died of the same comptaint : eight years afterwards, in 1854, a third died. The neighbors, evinight, breaking down doors, unroofing houses, shaking windows. The matter dently having the vampire theory in became serious. Many of the inhabitants were so thoroughly frightened their thoughts, determined to exhume the bodies of the first two children, and and panic-stricken as to flee; while those who remained nearly lost self control. They debated, they fasted, they made processions through the vil-lage, they sprinked the doors of the ouses with holy water, they speculated as to whether mass had been properly said, and the heart properly burned. At length they resolved to burn the body itself; they collected plenty of wood, pitch, and tar, and carried out their plan.
