

Female Influence. Domestic life is a woman's sphere; it is there that she is most useful and most appropriately employed.

Religion is the best armor in the world; it is the best armor in the world; it is the best armor in the world.

No man can be elevated who does not have something higher and better than himself.

Wisdom and power, like piety, are perfected through suffering.

Do not condemn or think hard of those who cannot see just as you see, or judge it their duty to contradict you.

Saxons from the mountains; moments make the year.

If good men are sad, it is not because they are good, but because they are not better.

Get all you can, save all you can, give all you can.

Lose not thy own for the sake of asking for it; 'twill give thee no thanks.

The generous heart should seem a pleasure which gives others pain.

The whole sum of human virtue may be reduced to speaking the truth always, and doing good to others.

Mercy readily recognizes merit. Certainly he cannot have it who does not know it when he sees it.

One principal point of good-breeding is to talk ourselves to three or four degrees of men—our superiors, our equals and those below us.

A little philosophy inclineth a man's mind to atheism, but depth of philosophy bringeth one's mind about to religion.

Honest industry is, after all, man's only sure dependence for the double blessing of a contented mind and comfortable livelihood.

Love may exist without jealousy, although this is rare; but jealousy may exist without love, and this is common.

An hour's industry will do more to cure cholerics, suppress evil humors, and relieve your affairs, than a month's moaning.

A man behind the times is apt to speak ill of them, on the principle that nothing looks well from behind.

Men's hearts ought to be set against one another, but set with one another, and all against the evil thing only.

The happiness of the human race in this world does not consist of our being devoid of passions, but in our learning to command them.

Some men are kinder to the occupants of the tenements than to their families. They will treat wife and children like dogs, but not dogs themselves.

A man should never be ashamed to own he has been in the wrong, which is by saying, in other words, that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday.

In all differences consider that both you and your opponent are dropping off, and that ere long your very memories will be extinguished.

Imperceptible good temper is an eternal defense against ill-natured sarcasm. The laugh is never long against the man who meets ridicule serenely.

As we hold a candle to the flame until it is fully lighted, so we must hold ourselves to Christ and his word by meditation.

Bestow all the time you can spare from the necessary business of life, in preparing yourself and those about you, for their entrance into a better life.

It is vain to hope to please all alike. Let a man stand with his face in what direction he will, he must necessarily turn his back to one half of the world.

Never hold anyone by the button of the hand, in order to be heard only; for if people are unwilling to hear you, you had better hold your tongue than speak in such a manner?

Who solemnly attends, patiently asks, calmly speaks, coolly answers, and ceases when he has no more to say, is in possession of some of the best resources of man.

There is no so agonizing a feeling in the whole catalogue of human suffering as the first conviction that the heart of the being whom we most tenderly love is estranged from us.

A Western paper accuses a contemporary of "dirty meanness," and writes: "We would like to understand that two can act at that game." A rather frank avowal.
