Agricultural,

Small Farm Maxims. 1. Small farms are cheaper and easier to manage than large ones and pay better for the capital invested. Therefore small farms are best, 2. If you want to make your farm pay, you must give it your daily, personal attention. But if your farm is too large you cannot do this; hence, as I said above, small farms are best. 3 If you don't want your farm to run away, you must stop the little leaks. We may expect fewer leaks on a small place than a big one; hence ngsin, small farms are best. 4. Feed your land well, and it will feed you. It takes less to feed a few acres than a great many. So you see small farms are best. 5. If you would live long and enjoy life, work a little, then rest a little.

But if you have a large farm you must labor all the time. Here again, small farms are best. 6. To raise big corn you must keep small grass. To make small grass you must cut often. So in this we find small farms are best. 7. If you have a good fence, you need fear no loss by stock. But fences are costly. Thus once more we find small farms are best. 8. If you want good roads, and plenty of schools, churches, and mills you must have a dense population. If farms are large this is impossible. Therefore, I declare small farms to be the best. Farms should increase in value year by year. It costs less to improve a few acres than a great many. Here as before small farms are best,-B. W. J., in Rural Carolinian.

Clear and Dry Stables.

A horse will endure severe cold weather without much inconvenience, so long as he is furnished with a dry stable. But require him to stand on a wet and foul floor, and his health will soon begin to fail. Horses often suffer from cold feet and legs. A great many stables have damp and wet floors. Few men who handle horses give proper attention to the feet and legs. Especially is this the case on farms. Much time is spent of a morning in rubbing, brushing, and smoothing the hair on the sides and hips, but at no time are the feet examined and properly cared for. Now, be it known, that the feet of a horse require more care than the body. They need ten times as much, for in one res pect they are almost the entire horse. All the grooming that can be done won't avail anything if the horse is forced to stand where his feet will be filthy. In this case the feet will become disordered; and then the legs will get badly out of fix; and with bad feet and bad legs, there is not much else of the horse fit for anything. Stable prisons generally are terribly severe on the feet and legs of horses; and unless these buildings can afford a dry room, where a horse can walk around, lie down, or roll over, they are not half so healthy and comfortable to the horse as the pasture, and should be avoided by all good hostlers in the country. Land Plaster. The commonly received idea of the value of Land Plaster in commercial manures, is that it is only serviceable as that rattled up to the gate. The child's an absorbent of the volatile elements, father stood by the wagon. as ammonia, which it will hold in the soil for the use of the growing crops.-Also it is an absorbent of moisture, and the use of it, (like salt in this respect) may mitigate the effects of drought upon the soil. Its effects, however, when applied alone to corn, have several times attracted our attention. Whether applied at the root, or a thimbleful dropped into the bud of the growing corn, the effect is great in maintaining a vigorous growth and rich green color.

Here is what a correspondent of the Rural New Yorker says of his experience in the use of plaster on corn: "The past season I used plaster alone on one piece of corn, skipping two rows a triangular-shaped field of one acre and one-fourth. The corn on the two not plastered weighed 183 poudds; shortest rows plastered, 224 pounds; longest rows plastered, 274 pounds; or about 100 pounds of corn by using plaster to 73 pounds where not used. There were 150 bushels of corn on this piece,"

Fruit Trees. To make fruit trees bear largely for many years in succession, the soil under them should not be cultivated, should be ploughed summer and fall, and manured every year; it is said that the best manure for bushes and trees is their own leaves and twigs; these should be gathered together in a heap every autumn, mixing therewith some barn yard manure, to be dampened occasionally, to keep the leaves from getting dry and being blo vn away; then spread out in the early spring; in addition, a bushel of time mixed well with two or three bushels of wood ashes, spread under each tree once a year, would add greatly to their fruitfulness.

The reason fruit trees die in a few years, or begin to bear less fruit and of inferior quality, is because the trees, not being manured, exhaust the quality of the soil about them, necessary for their sustenance.

Oats for Lambs. The importance of having lambs ready for market at as early a period of the season as possible, is a matter which every farmer who lives in the vicinity of large markets, understands or at least ought to. It may perhaps not be known to all farmers, that lambs are able to eat oats when from three to four weeks old, and my experience has been that there is no provender with the use of which I am familiar, that appears to have such an immediate and salutary effect upon them. All that is necessary to be done is to moisten the oats, and place them in a trough raised about six or eight inches from the floor, and where the old sheep cannot get at them. Those who are skeptical in regard to this matter, can very readily test the value of this suggestion on a single lamb or a pair .- Cor. Journal of the Rye for Milch Cows.

A foreign paper says: When rye is of good quality, it certainly constitutes an excellent food for all kinds of stock. Dairy cows fed daily on five pounds of rye meal and a sufficiency of cut straw have been found to yield very large quantities of milk. In Holland, which is famous for its excellent butter, rye is common food for milch cows; and indeed, generally throughout northern and central Europe there exists asgreat a prejudice in favor of rye as a cattle food as there is a prejudice against it in hese countries.

Young Folks.

The Story of a Clover Blossom, BY AMELIA E, DALEY.

A bunch of pink clover opened her eyes one morning at sunrise, and looked about her. She grew near the gate of a little garden in the country, and was one of a large number of pink clovers.

On each side of the pathway, leading Organs, from the gate, were little flower-beds, bordered with white shells, and filled with gaily tinted flowers. There were pansies with their purple vests, roses with pink, blushing petals, fragrant white lilies, and many other flowers, They nodded to each other in the morning air, and seemed very happy. Pink Clover thought they were beautiful, and looked at her own dress as well as she could.

"Am I like you?" she said to a large clover that grew near her.

This clover had been in existence three days, and her blossoms were be ginning to turn brown on top, but she did not know it. She nodded her head to the young clover, and said, "Just that the other did not know she was fading; but she said nothing, for fear of giving offense.

The door of the cottage was opened, and a little girl came out and ran down the walk. Her eyes were as blue as violets, her hair shone like corn silk, and her cheeks were as pink as the roses. She wore a white frock, and a long blue sash. She ran to the flower beds and, began to pick the flowers. Her mother came stood and in the doorway. "Gather the most beautiful,"she said.

Pink Clover watched the child as she went from flower to flower. She thought she would not like to be plucked from her stem, and wither away She leaned forward and whispered to the rose that grew near her, "Why do you not resist? Your thorns are long and sharp." "We do not bloom for ourselves;" answered the rose; "we are made to give pleasure to man, and when we are gathered, though we droop and die, our mission is fulfilled."

Pink Clover was silent. She wished the little girl would pluck her also, that she might gladden a human heart; but the child passed her by and took the beautiful rose.

"No one thinks much of clover blos soms," said a tuft of grass, "or of the grasses, but the same hand made us

"We too have our work," said the old clover who had spoken before; 'whole countries would be desolat without us. We make glad the waste places."

The little girl had gone into the house, but she soon came out again, bearing her flowers. Her mother came with her. They got into a little wagon

"We had better take some grass with us for the horse to eat," said the mother : "cut that close to the gate."

The man brought a scythe and did as she told him. He cut down Pink Clover, too. The back of the wagon was filled with grass; the father took his seat, and Pink Clover found herself going to the great city.

"But only for a horse to eat," she said to herself.

The wagon rolled on and reached the city. It joited over the stones of the streets, and tossed Pink Clover quite high in the air sometimes. Everything around looked so dirty that she wondered how any one could want to each side of the unplastered. This was but her father told her they would soon see many beautiful houses. At length, in turning a corner, the wagon jolted so hard that poor Pink Clover, when she was tossed up, did not come down on the grass again, but right in the dirty street. No one saw her fall. She lay there, and the wagon passed out of sight. "Not even to be eaten by a horse," she sighed. "I must wither, and be trampled on by careless feet." Several hours passed, and the little bunch of clover lay fading in the street. The hot sun beat down upon her; the dust blew over her; but she had not been stepped on.

A boy passed along the street. His clothes were clean, though patched and old. He looked sadly down as he walked. When he reached the corner where Pink Clover lay he saw her. His face brightened; he stooped and picked her up. "Poor little blossom," he said, and walked on holding her tightly in his

He turned out of that street into one still narrower and dirtler. He entered a wretched house, passed up the stairs, and went into a small room. It was clean, but very scantily furnished. A sick girl was lying in the bed asleep. Her hands were so thin that every blue vein in them was visible. Her mother was bending over her. When the boy entered she raised her head.

"How is sister?" he asked. "She is easier now," answered the mother, "but she has been suffering very much. She longs for pure air. If she could have that she would live.

The boy held up the bunch of clover blossoms. "I found it in the street,"he said; "it seems like my poor sister fading away in the close city. I will revive it if I can."

He placed Pink Clover in a glass of cool water, and set the glass on the table. He sprinkled some drops of water over her, and she felt herself beginning to revive. She held up her head, and her fragrant breath stole in the room. Soon the sick girl opened her eyes, and saw the little blossoms. She held out her hands towards them, and her mother gave them to her. She inhaled their perfume, and a glad light came into her eyes. "Oh! dear mother," she cried, "I said that if I could only have a breath from the country I should get well, and God has sent it to me in these little flowers." Then the little clover knew that through unthought-of ways, she had been brought to fulfill her mission; that when she lay unheeded in the dust she had been coming nearer and nearer to the work of cheering a human heart.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN TONIC.

Was compounded for those not inclined to extreme bitters, and is intended for use in cases when some alcoholic stimulant is required in connection with the Tonic properties of the Bitters. Each bettle of the Tonic contains one bottle of the Bitters, combined with pure SANTA CRUZ RUM, and Ravored in such a manner that the extreme bitterness of the bilders is overcome, forming a preparation highly agreeable and pleasant to the patiet, and containing the medicinal virtues of the Bitters. The price of the Tonic is $1.59 per Bottle which many persons think too high. They must take into consideration that the stimulant used is guaranteed to be of a pure quality. A poor article could be furnished at a cheape price, but is into the ter to pay a little more and have a good article? A modicinal preparation should contain none but the best ingredients; and they who expect to obtain a cheap compound, and be benefited by it will most certainly be cheated.

HE CAUSE AND CURE OF The primary cause of Consumption is derangement of the digestive organs. This derangement of the digestive organs. This derangement of the digestive organs. This derangement is assimilation 1 mean that process by which the nutripole of the food is converted into hood, and thence into the solids of the body. Persons with digestion thus impaired, having the slightest prolisposition to pulmonary disease, or if they take cold, will be very liable to have Consumption of the Lungs in some of its forms; and i hold that it will be impossible to cure any case of Consumption without first restoring a good digestion and heatiny assimilation. The very first thing to be done is to cleanse the stomach and bowels from all diseased mucha and sime, watch is clogging these organs to that they cannot perform their functions, and then rouse up and restore the liver to a heatiny action. For this purpose the surrest may best remedy is Schenck's Matanake Phila. These Phils clean the stomach and bowels of all the dead and morbid slime that is causing disease and neady in the whole system. They will clear out the liver of all diseased bit that have accumulated there, and rouse it up to a rew and healthy action, by which statural and healthy netton, by which statural and healthy title is secreted.

I have seen many persens cured with only one seamed may, live and early: life for good oils age. This is what scheeners a section and the stormen, sweeten and strengthen it, get up a good digestion, and give Nature the assistance she needs to clear the system of all the disease that is in the imag, whatever the form may be.

It, is important that white using Schener's Medicines, care should be exercised not to take cold; keep in-doors in cold and damp weather; avoid night air, and take oul-door exercise only in a genial and warm sunshine.

I wish it distinctly understood that when I recommend a patient to be careful in regard to take ing cold, while using may Medicines, i do no for a special reason. A man who has but partially recovered from the effects of a bad cold is far moze liable to a relapse than one who has been entarely cured; and it is precisely the same in regard to Consumption. So long as the lungs are not perfectly healed, just so long is there in toulent danger of a full return of the disease. Hence it is that I so strenuously caution pulmonary patients against exposing themselves to an almosphere that is not genial and pleasant. Confirmed Consumptives' lungs are a mass of sores, which the least change of a fullity to many medicines consists in my ability to subdue in flame. The grand secret of my success with my Medicines consists in my ability to subdue in flame. The grand secret of my success with my Medicines consists in my ability to subdue in flame. The grand secret of my success with my Medicines consists in my ability to subdue in flame. The grand secret of my success with my Medicines consists in my ability to ability of a flame of the healty do. An indiamed lung cannot, with safety to the patient, be exposed to the biting blasts of Winter or the childing winds of Spring or Autumn. It should be carefully shielded from all returns and a strength.

The person should be kept on a wholesome and nutritions diet, and all the Medicines continued and the activities of strength was many years, wit
