Variety of Cattle Food-Carrots for Horses. It has frequently occurred to me that we do not give a sufficient variety of food to our farm stock, and especially to our horses. It must be admitted by all that the stall, the stable and the farm-yard are not the natural places for the horse, however ready we must be to confess that there is no other alternative than to keep him there at certain seasons of the year. A horse will live comfortably and thrifty perhaps, upon the provender we generally furnish him, and will not even vary to the stereotyped mess of corn, or oats and hay that is furnished him; but if the poor fellow could speak his wishes as plainly as we can ours, we should soon hear the voice of complaint. To prove this, just go into his presence with a bunch of green grass or fodder, a mess of carrots, or even a dish of chopped-up apples, and my word for it, his eyes will glisten, and he will thank you with an eager and joyful whinny for the anticipated delicacy.

The Fairy of the Lake. (CONCLUDED). One day Fritz was chasing a roe which dashed down the mountain side, and was only brought to bay by the bank of the enchanted lake. A bullet from Fritz's rifle then ended his career. Tired with the long chase, the huntsman heedlessly dipped his neck and shoulders into the cool waters to refresh himself, when, with a joyous laugh, Aquarela suddenly sprang to the surface, and entwining her arms around him, drew him down to her coral bowers.

But it is not simply on the principle of humanity that I advocate this change of food, or at least the varying of it occasionally. It is positive economy as all well know who have tried the varying of roots, and more especially carrots, at intervals through the winter and spring. They not only keep the animals' bowels in prime condition, but they appear to give tone to the whole system, inspiring him with more life and vigor, and assisting largely in the shedding of his coat as Spring approaches. I would therefore, advise my fellow farmers who have not already done so, to give this suggestion a trial, and vary their cattle food.

TURNIPS.—Every farmer will find it profitable to raise a quantity of these roots, the labor not being so great as to stop him from doing so. If judiciously managed, the amount of labor is trifling. They form a most excellent article for feeding to cattle, and even horses soon become very fond of them, and thrive as well upon them as upon carrots, while the cost of raising is far less. They form a most excellent and important article of stock food, especially for an occasional change. Rutabagas and English turnips are best fed out in the early part of the winter.

WOOD ASHES.—Ashes from the wood of the Hickory, sugar maple, elm, etc., contain about 50 per cent of potash compounds, consisting chiefly of combinations with carbonic acid and silica, while the ashes of pine wood will rarely yield more than 20 per cent.—Ashes saved from clearings often contain earth, mixed with them in gathering the remains from fires. When wood is used for burning lime, the ashes are often put into the market largely mixed with that substance. Sifted coal ashes are sometimes used to adulterate wood ashes, and the fraud can hardly be detected by the eye.

Leached ashes also retain a portion of potash, usually in combination with silica or phosphoric acid. These compounds are slowly soluble in water, and, therefore, are not removed in leaching; but they are valuable, especially to grain crops and grasses. Ashes, whether leached or unleached, should never be suffered to go to waste. Even coal ashes may be used to good advantage on stiff clay soils. Their effect, however, is more mechanical than chemical.

The Apple Tree Borer. Having seen a great many remedies and a great many plans for destroying the apple tree borer, and none of them very satisfactory, suppose I give a case from actual knowledge of my own:

"My neighbor put out an orchard of fifty trees; they were four years old from the graft, and as they had not been very well pruned in the nursery, pruning was done at the time of transplanting. The trees started all right in the spring, but alas! the borer. The trees were punctured from root to branch, and took on the usual sickly appearance. The owner concluded to try an experiment, for it was nothing but death anyhow, so he prepared a whitewash as follows: Take fresh slaked lime and coal oil sufficient to make a good whitewash and put it on with a brush from root to branch, as high as the borer had been working. This proved a perfect success, for the trees cast off their sickly appearance the same season. I examined them the same fall, the whitewash still on them, and I think I never saw more healthy and vigorous trees. I have not tried this remedy in my own orchard, for there are no borers in it; if there were I should not hesitate a moment. We are not much troubled with the borer in this country, except on trees that have been wounded."

MILK designed for butter making, as a rule, should be agitated as little as possible until the cream has risen. We cannot say that such a moderate agitation of the milk as would arise simply from skimming as above described would lessen the quantity of cream; but any excessive agitation has a tendency to diminish the quantity of cream. This has been abundantly proved by experiments made on milk, a portion of which has been retained at the farm, and the rest sent by wagon and rail to the city. In numerous instances, where a careful test of such milk has been made, the milk which has been less disturbed threw up most cream.

LARD FOR LICE.—Hiram Barton, Shaftsbury, Vt., writes the Farmers' Club, that two years since his fowls were affected with lice, so much so that it was unsafe to step into the poultry house. He applied lard upon the top of the poles on which the fowls roosted, and sifted sulphur on the lard freely. The pest was soon gone and has not again appeared. The remedy is so easy and simple that every person keeping one hen should be compelled, by good sense, to use it."
