

Agricultural.

Oiling and Blacking Harness. At this season, the farmer should overhaul, repair, oil and black his harness so they will be pliable in the cold weather, and durable and safe.

Young Folks.

Truthful Sam. A boy went to live with a man who was accounted a hard master. He never kept his boys; they ran away, or gave notice that they meant to quit, so he was half the time without and in search of a boy.

"I should like to see a boy, now-a-days, that has a spark of goodness in him," growled the master.

"And Mr. Jones will thrash you for it," said another boy, who was in the wood-house with him.

"No," said the boy, "he was afraid; Mr. Jones has got such a temper."

"I don't know what time it was; but when Mr. Jones came into the house, the boy heard him. He got up, crept down stairs and met Mr. Jones in the kitchen.

"Sir," said Sam, "I broke your saw, and I thought I'd come and tell you before you saw it in the morning."

"I should think morning soon enough to tell of your carelessness. Why do you come to-night?"

"Because," said Sam, "I was afraid, if I put it off, I might be tempted to tell a lie about it. I'm sorry I broke it; but I tried to be careful."

Mr. Jones looked at the boy from head to foot; then, stretching out his hand, "There Sam. That's right, that's right. Go to bed, boy. Never fear. I'm glad the saw broke; it shows the mettle of a son of mine. Go to bed."

Mr. Jones was fairly won. Never better before. After that, than Sam and he. Sam thinks justice has not been done to Mr. Jones. If the boys had treated him honestly and "above board," he would have been a good man to live with. It was their conduct that soured and made him suspicious. I do not know how this is; I only know that Sam Fisher finds in Mr. Jones a kind and faithful master.

A Sharp Detective. A Madrasse had a monkey who he was fond of. The man had occasion to go on a journey, and took with him money and jewels, and his chain, the monkey. Some rogues determined to rob him of everything he had; accordingly they lay in wait for him, and murdered him. Having secured the money and jewels, they threw the murdered man into a dry well, and having covered it up with twigs and dry leaves, they went home. The monkey who was on the top of a tree, saw the whole of the proceedings, and when the murderers departed, he came down and made tracks for the Tahsildar's house, and by his cries and moans attracted the attention of that functionary. Inviting the Tahsildar, by dumb signs, to follow him, and pointed downwards. The Tahsildar thereupon got men to go down, and of course the body was discovered. The monkey then led the men to the place where the jewels and money were buried. He then took them to the bazaar, and as soon as he caught sight of the murderers, he ran after him, bit him in the leg, and would not let him go till he was secured. In this way all the murderers were caught. The men, it is said, have confessed their crime, and they now stand committed for trial before the Tallicherry court at the ensuing session. That monkey, we think, ought to be made an inspector of police.—Exchange.

BY F. B. C. A pair of old bears, finding that their life of robbery paid them but poorly, concluded to beg for a living, so they went to the dwelling of an Ape and asked for bread.

"We hope," said they, "that you will hear us so kindly and supply our wants so willingly that we shall not wish to return to the rude manners of our wild cousins in the forest, who take what they need by force. Who, he silent?"

"You're right," said the Ape, "I've heard you yell, you yell, you yell, and your eyes bright, you would to-day be robbers as your wild cousins in the forest are. Here is a loaf of bread! but have done with your boasting, and do not make a virtue of your weakness."

A LITTLE four-year old best his mother to talk to him and say something funny. "How can I?" she asked, "don't you see how busy I am baking these pies?" "Well, you might say, 'Charley, won't you have a pie?' That would be funny for you."
