Humorous. HARMON'S gorilla was heard to remark one hot day that 'he'd be damned if he'd wear a hair overcoat much longer than the hot weather for $10 a week!'

Humorous. A countryman saw a skeleton of a donkey in a local museum. 'How odd we look without flesh,' he said.

Humorous. A Boston sculptor has completed a statue of Job, the mother of Moses. The old lady, we regret to say, is dead.

Humorous. Mr. Mustard is appointed a school-teacher in Kansas to draw out little boys' ideas and make 'em smart.

Humorous. A Wisconsin girl has committed suicide by swallowing her hair daily.

Humorous. Milk is selling for one cent a quart in Minnesota. That price will pay for the wear and tear of a cow's tail in switching the flies.

Humorous. There are two things in this world that are not to be had for nothing: a woman's opinion and the business end of a soap-suds.

Humorous. The following notice may be seen on a blacksmith's shop in Essex, Massachusetts: 'I have no work on hand on Monday except sickle and death.'

Humorous. An Albanian was seriously hurt last week by the bursting of a beer barrel. He says he would have much preferred to drink the beer and have the 'burst' in his own person.

Humorous. A Leavenworth editor sat down in a reserved seat already occupied by a horse. He stands up when scolding his editorial.

Humorous. A Connecticut editor says: 'If that accretion artist who so assiduously practices "Shoo Fly" and other classical music, appears in the hall at the American Consul's house, Honolulu, he will be liberally rewarded.'

Humorous. A venerable dame in Virginia, aged 69 years, recently cut a new set of teeth. She is so delighted with the result that she has had the teeth which were worn out of her mouth, and the wax dropped on them. Her husband says it will be a great many years before she gets another set to cut.

Humorous. A lively Hoosier maiden wept when she read how Longfellow had cut his pastern so as to ruin him for life. She says so fondly of his poetry, she said, as she snuffed the peony tear-drops from her nose.

Humorous. A Leavenworth editor doesn't now spend time watching the little boys who get their hair in his sanctum to keep the clock ticking. He came in one day and did not observe that the wax was still in his chair, and consequently executed a fancy dance without music.

Humorous. At New Orleans recently, a man jumped into the river with the intention of committing suicide. He, however, changed his mind, swam ashore, and scrambled upon a dock, whence he viewed with much interest the efforts of the police and citizens to recover his body.

Humorous. This old advertisement is from an English paper. A lady had been cut on a strike. He prefers that to work. He ain't any use to me. I must work to young a child and old a woman. He then goes in to see the doctor. He says he will send him to the hospital. He says he will send him to the hospital.

Humorous. Alexander Dumas, once asked to contribute ten francs for the funeral of a lady who had died in the most unfortunate circumstances. 'What?' exclaimed the great novelist, 'ten francs for burying a baillif! Here are one hundred francs—bury ten baillifs!'

Humorous. An editor, who was on a dead-end excursion with his husband, lost his pass and had to walk wearily half a mile to get a man who had no ticket to sell the cook stove, and remit the proceeds at once.

Humorous. The cheerful horsefly is said to gaily parabolize the spinal column of Tennessee. A horsefly, it is said, once bit a man in the neck. He then went to the doctor. He says he will send him to the hospital. He says he will send him to the hospital.

Humorous. A Western traveler writes: 'In passing through the barbed wire of Wisconsin, I saw a man who had been cut by the wire. He was lying on the ground, and his wife was standing over him, crying. He said to her: "Don't cry, my dear, for I am not hurt. I am only a little scratched. I will be all right in a few minutes."'
