Horses at Pasture.—There is a common notion among farmers...

We think this is a mistake. There can be no doubt that grass is the natural food for the horse...

A short nip of grass daily for a horse that is kept up is beneficial...

How Dairy Stock Run Down.—Dairyman complain that they cannot afford to raise their calves...

Overgrown Hogs.—There is not one single advantage to be claimed in favor of big hogs...

Roots as Feed.—An English farmer puts in a strong plea for turnips...

Clover for Hogs.—An Ohio hog-raiser advocates the system of pasturing on clover during the summer...

Treatment of Colic.—Col. Colman of The Rural World, who thinks if there were no passionate men...

Wasted Water.—One acre of meadow that can be irrigated is worth three acres not susceptible of such treatment.

Katie's Dream.—Katie fell asleep by the fire one afternoon, and when she awoke she said to her mother—

"Oh, mother, I have had such a dream! And her mother said—

"What was it, Katie? Tell me." So she rubbed her little eyes, and began—

"I dreamt I was a good fairy, in a green gauze dress; and I had a wand; and when I saw any one sick, or sorry, or in distress, I just tapped them with my wand—

And her mother asked— "But her mother asked—

"What would you do, Katie, if you really were a fairy? Come now, think it over, and tell me."

"So Katie thought a minute very hard, and then she said—

"I'd make baby all right, the minute he tumbled down, and not let him cry a bit. And granny's dim eyes should see the wand, and the stitches in her knitting be picked up the minute they fell.

"And old scampers Katie to do an errand for granny.

"Katie's father was a clergyman, so Katie saw and heard a great deal of other people's troubles, which perhaps was the cause of her dream.

"That evening when baby came down for his half hour in the drawing room he was fretful, and when it was his bedtime he would not go unless Katie did something to help him.

"Katie was actually doing all she had thought of, and she forgot to feel angry that he did not like baby in the room, and often scolded him, her dear little dog, and by-and-by, out of sheer pity, she grew to wait on him as she did on her grandmother—

"You haven't got that," he used to say, "or else I should see that school popping up in the village. Ah, we must wait a bit for that!"

"But how long do you think they waited?"

"Only till her birthday. Then Katie found on her plate an envelope. All sorts of thin crackling paper came out of the envelope, on which was written, 'A wand for my good fairy, with which to tap for the school.'"

"Uncle Dick had put bank-notes—$300—in that envelope, and Katie's father was to have his school directly.

"Mother," said Katie, her eyes glistening, "I needn't wish to be a good fairy any more, need I?"
