How to Have a Neat Farm. To those who are desirous of giving a more orderly appearance to their premises but who don't quite know what to take hold of first, 'Health and Home' offers some helpful hints: Take a yoke of cattle or a span of horses, and put them to a wagon or cart. Fasten a stone-bait behind. On the stone-bait put a crowbar, a pick, a hoe, a spade, an ax, a saw, a brush-hook or scythe, a hammer, nails, spikes, a few bolts of different sizes, a monkey-wrench, and such other tools as you will be likely to want, and drive along the side of every fence on the farm. If you come across a piece of board or a broken rail throw it into the wagon. If you find a plow-point, a cultivator-tooth, a broken reaper guard, a horse-shoe, an oil can, or an old hoe, put it on the stone-bait and bring it home. Stones may be thrown on and drawn to some convenient place. If you come across any weeds, mow them down; if any branches or bushes, cut them with a brush-hook or ax. If a board is loose on the fence, put a nail in it. If a gate sags, straighten it up. If there are any bolts in the gate, see that the nuts are tight. Take a man or a boy, or both, along with you. You will find plenty of work. If there is a plank bridge across a stream, see that the sleepers are not rotten. The hot sun has probably warped the planks, and they will need another spike or two. If there are any sticks or weeds in a ditch remove them, and throw out any dirt that may have been trodden in from the sides by the cattle or hogs. In this way go over the farm. Then attend to the barn-yards. Pick up anything that may be lying around, and put it in its proper place. Boards that are of any use should be placed in a pile by themselves under cover. These that are useless should be sawn, and split up into kindling, to be piled by itself in the wood-shed. If there are any loose stones in the yards, draw them off. Scrape up all the scattered manure or dirt, and place it in a compact heap where it will ferment, or spread it at once on grass land and draw it. Go into the garden and see if there is any rubbish there that should be removed, or any sticks or pieces of board or tools to pick up. Possibly you will find some old barrel-staves or hoops about. Make kindling of them. If there is any old iron about the premises, it is a good time to dispose of it, as it is worth one and a half cents per pound. Old implements, machines, tools, etc., that are worn out and of no further use, had better be knocked to pieces and the iron sold. If there are any parts that may be useful in repairing, they should be preserved by themselves. This is true of the wood-work as well as of the castings. Almost everything, sooner or later, comes in useful on a farm. But unless you have abundance of room, it does not pay to lumber up the premises with useless implements and machines. Have all your logs mended; mark them and hang them up. Mark all the forks, rakes, hoes, spades, shovels, cut-offers, etc. Rub them over with petroleum, and put them in their proper places. All harvest tools and machines should be painted with petroleum and stowed away. If you are short of room, much space may be saved by taking the wheels off the steel-toothed rake, and the pools and cutter-bars off the mower and reaper. Any one who has not tried it will be astonished how many implements and machines may be stowed away in a small space. This will do for a beginning. Then, when any implement is done with for the season, rub it over with petroleum and stow it away. When one thing is in order, it is a comparatively easy matter to keep them in order; but still it is a daily work. It is however, work that pays over and over again.

Young Folks.

Armand. A poor workman named Bertrand had six young children, and he was very much troubled how to support them. By increasing misfortune the year was sterile, and bread sold for twice as much as the year before. Bertrand labored day and night; and although he worked very hard, it was impossible for him to earn enough to satisfy the poorest kind of bread to satisfy the hunger of his famishing children. He was greatly discouraged. One day he called together his wife, family, and with tears in his eyes he said: "My dear children, bread has become so high that, with my labor, I cannot earn enough to support you. You see that I have to pay as much for this little piece of bread as I can earn in one day. You must be content to divide with the little I can procure; there certainly will not be enough to satisfy you, but there will be at least enough to keep you from starving." The poor man could say no more. He raised his eyes toward Heaven and began to weep. His children wept also, and each one said, "May God come to our aid, poor little unhappy ones that we are. Help, our Father, and do not let us die of hunger." Bertrand divided his bread into seven equal parts. He kept one piece for himself and distributed the others among the children. But one of them who was called Armand refused to receive his portion, and said, "I cannot take any, my father, I feel sick, eat my share or divide it among the children." "My poor child, what is the matter?" said Bertrand, taking the child into his arms. "I am sick," replied Armand. "I am very, very sick, I want to go to bed." Bertrand carried him to his bed, and the next morning, overwhelmed with grief, he went to the doctor, and begged him to come out of charity to see his sick son and to help him. The doctor who was a pious man, went to Bertrand, although he was sure that he would not be paid for his visit. He approached Armand's bed, felt of his pulse, but he did not find any symptoms of disease. He found that he was very weak, and to reanimate him, he wanted to prescribe something. "Do not order anything for me, for I will not take anything!" "You will not take it! and why not if you please?" "Do not ask me, sir, for I cannot tell you." "And what prevents you, my child? You seem to be quite an obstinate little boy." "Doctor it is not obstinacy, I assure you." "I am glad to hear it, but I do not understand you, I will ask your father, who perhaps will not be so mysterious." "Ah, I beg you say nothing to my father about it." "You are a very strange child, I must absolutely inform your father, because you will not tell me." "Oh, sir, be careful, I would rather tell you, but first I beg you will send my brothers and sisters out." The doctor ordered the children to go out, and then Armand said: "Alas, sir, in a time so hard, it is with difficulty that my father is able to earn a little pittance. He divides it among us. Each one has a small piece, and he wishes to leave almost nothing for himself. It makes me feel so sad to see my brothers and sisters endure hunger. I am the eldest and have more strength than they have. I would rather not eat so that they can divide my portion. It is for this that I intend to be sick and cannot eat any more." "My father will not let my father know anything about it." The doctor wiped his eyes and said: "But are you not hungry my dear friend?" "I beg your pardon, sir, I am very hungry, but that does not hurt me as much as to see them suffer." "But you will soon die if you do not nourish yourself." "I feel it, but I will die willingly; my father will have one mouth less to fill, and when I am with the good God I will pray Him to give something to my little brothers and sisters to eat." The honest doctor felt extreme compassion and admiration at hearing a child talk so generously. He took him in his arms and embracing him said: "No, my dear friend, you will not die, God, the Father of every one, will take care of you and your family. I thank him for having sent me here. I will return soon." He ran to his house and loaded one of his servants with all sorts of provisions, and returned with him quickly to Armand and laid around a table, and made them eat until they were satisfied. It was a charming sight for the good doctor to see the joy of the innocent creature. On going out he requested Armand not to worry himself, for he would provide for all their necessities. Each day he sent them an abundance of nourishment. Other charitable persons to whom he told his adventure imputed his benevolence. Some sent suits of clothes and linen, some a few days afterward the little family had more than they needed. As soon as the price was told what the brave little Armand had done for his father and brothers, full of admiration for so much generosity, he sent for Bertrand and said to him: "You have an admirable child; I want to be a father to him also. I have ordered to be given you every year in my name the sum of a hundred crowns, Armand and all your children shall be educated at my expense in any trade that they choose, and if they profit by it I will return the care of their fortune." Bertrand returned home overcome with joy, and throwing himself upon his knees, thanked God for having given him such a worthy child. In Scotland they have narrow, open drains, called sheep drains. A man was riding a donkey one day, across a sheep pasture, and when the donkey came to a sheep drain he would go over it. So the man rode him back a short distance, and turning around, put the whip to him, thinking, of course, the donkey going so fast would jump the drain before he ever knew it. But not so. On they came, and when the donkey got to the drain he stopped all of a sudden, and the man went over Mr. Jack's head. No sooner had he touched the ground than he got up, and looking the donkey straight in the face, he said: "Very well pitched; but then how are you going to get over yourself?"
