Wise Sayings.

None have less praise than those who hunt most after it.

A passionate man rides a horse that runs away with him.

Two centuries ago not one person in a hundred wore stockings.

The best way to condemn bad traits is by practicing good ones.

Shakespeare died on the anniversary of his birth, and so did Rafaelle.

A life of full and constant employment is the only safe and happy one.

If a man cheats you once, blame him; if a second time, blame yourself.

Our greatest glory consists not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall.

Camphor has been discovered to be an antidote to that terrible poison strychnine.

There is a house in Paris which sells annually half a million pairs of wooden shoes.

The great difference between men, the great and insignificant, is energy.

A lady describing an ill-natured man says "he never smiles but he feels ashamed of it."

If you wish hens to lay eggs plentifully, have a pan of lime-water always in their coops.

He who never gives advice and he who never takes it are alike unworthy of friendship.

A man that astonishes at first soon makes people impatient if he does not continue in the same enlivening key.

A Detroit boy says he doesn't want to die until he gets used to it, so it won't hurt so bad.

It is as difficult for revenge to act without exciting suspicion as for a rattlesnake to stir without making a noise.

Money in your purse will credit you; wisdom in your head will adorn you; both in your necessity will serve you.

Money and time have both their value. He who makes a bad use of the one will never make a good use of the other.

Patience and attention will bring us far. If a cat watches long enough at the mouse holes, the mouse shall not escape.

The gleeful laugh of happy children is the best home music; and the graceful figures of childhood are the best statuary.

We must row with the oars we have; and as we cannot order the wind, we are obliged to sail with the wind that Providence gives.

Every man thinks that Cesar's wife ought to be above suspicion; but he is far less particular as to what Cesar himself ought to be.

There are some who write, talk and think so much about vice and virtue, that they have no time to practice either the one or the other.

Fortune has been considered the guardian divinity of fools; and she is certainly very kind in helping those who cannot help themselves.

It was remarked by Dionysius, the sophist, in counselling moderation in pleasure, "that honey should be eaten from the tip of the finger."

It is very well to blush when you are detected in a mean act; but you had a great deal better blush when you first think of committing it.

None are so seldom found alone, and are so soon tired of their own company, as those coxcombs who are on the best terms with themselves.

It is our duty not only to scatter benefits, but even to strew flowers for the sake of our fellow-travelers in the pathway of this wonderful world.

There are two elements of success in the world, flattery and insolence; some use one mode, some the other, but the most successful use both or either, as the position requires.

Half the reputations for wit that pass current in fashionable life are based on ill-natured sayings of persons who would find it difficult to obtain any notice in society, except by censorious observations.

The separation of friends by death is less terrible than the divorce of true hearts that have loved, but have ceased to sympathise, while memory is still recalling what they once were to each other.

The great designs that have been digested and matured, and the great literary works that have been begun and finished in prisons, prove that tyrants have not yet discovered any chains that can fetter the mind.

All deep feeling agree in this, that they seek for solitude and are nursed by solitude. Deep grief, deep love—how naturally do these ally themselves with religious feelings; and all three, love, grief, religion, are haunters of solitary places.

The brain of a child one year old, as for the first time, resembles a large and superb camelia, with its ivory nerves, veined with delicate rosy traces, and elsewhere of a pale blue. We say "ivory" for want of a better term; it is an immaculate white.

How to Build Up a Place.

There can hardly be a greater sign of prosperity in a community than a disposition to help one another—lift a little when a neighbor's wheel gets stuck in the mud.

We know of a place where a man's barn with all his winter's stores of grain and hay were consumed by fire in the night. Immediately all the men of the country side mustered and hauled up timber for a new barn, and then a big raising came off. After that the sound of twenty or more hammers were heard until the whole was shingled and sided. But their deed of kindness was not done yet; one after another offered to take a head of stock and winter them for him, thus greatly reducing his loss and assuring his heart of the more durable riches of brotherly love and neighborly good will. No one can compute in money the value of one such example of noble liberality in a community especially in its influence upon the young.

When this spirit prevails there is sure to be progress in a place even if all the improvements are in their infancy. People will come and settle in a place which bears such a good name. Now, if you desire to see your place growing popular, do what you can to show yourself a good neighbor, especially to those who need a little extra help.

If a man starts a tin shop or a blacksmith's shop in your place don't harness up and drive five miles to buy your pans and get your horses shod because you have been in the habit of doing it. Patronize the new comer when you want anything done in his line. Speak encouragingly to him and well of him to your neighbors. Little words of approval or of censure go a long way, and when once you have spoken them you can not call them back.

Help the sick especially if they are poor, for poverty and illness are indeed a heavy burden. Perform all acts of loving charity which fall day by day in your path, remembering who it is that has said, "Ye shall in no wise lose your reward."

Whipping Horses.

I would caution all who train or use horses against exciting the ill-will of the animals. Many think they are doing finely, and are proud of their success in horse-training by means of severe whipping or otherwise rousing and stimulating the passions, and then, from necessity, crushing the will through which the resistance is prompted. No mistake can be greater than this; and there is nothing that so fully exhibits the ability, judgment and skill of the real horseman as the care and tact displayed in training instead of repelling the action of the mind. Although it may be necessary to use the whip sometimes, it should always be applied judiciously, and care should be taken not to rouse the passions or excite the will to obstinacy. The legitimate and proper use of the whip is calculated to operate on the sense of fear almost entirely. The affections and better nature must be appealed to in training horses as in training a child, but if only the passions are excited, the effect is depraving and injurious. This is a vital principle, and can be disregarded in the management of sensitive, courageous horses only at the imminent risk of spoiling them. I have known many horses of naturally gentle character to be spoiled by being whipped once, and one horse that was made vicious by being struck with a whip once while standing in his stall. I have referred to those instances to show the danger of rough treatment, and the effect that may be easily produced by ill usage, especially with fine blooded horses and those of highly nervous temperament. Many other cases might be cited, as such are, by no means uncommon. Sensitive horses should never be left after they have been excited by the whip or other means until calmed down by rubbing or patting the head and neck and giving apples, sugar, or something of which the animal is fond. Remember the whip must be used with great care, or it is liable to do mischief, and may cause irreparable injury.

How Often Should Cows be Milked.

Regularity in the milking of cows is of as much importance as regularity in feeding them. In a state of nature, the cow is relieved of its milk a great many times each day. A calf allowed to remain with its mother will help itself seven or eight times each day. Under such circumstances the udder of the cow will remain small, and if allowed to retain the milk secreted during the twelve hours, feverish symptoms are likely to be produced. The practice of milking cows more than twice in twenty-four hours causes the capacity of the udder to be greatly increased, and probably helps in maintaining the lacteal secretion long after pregnancy has taken place. When, however, by an artificial system, the cow has been enabled to retain her milk without inconvenience for twelve hours or so, she ought to be milked regularly every day at the same hour. When the time for milking arrives, the udder usually becomes distended to its utmost capacity, and if the milk is not speedily removed, the animal suffers considerable pain. Cases of fever, the result of allowing animals to remain too long unmilked, are, indeed, by no means of unfrequent occurrence. It is especially necessary to attend to this point for some days after the animal has brought forth its young, for during that period very little irritation of the lacteal organs is likely to bring on that most fatal of all maladies, fever. If milking be too long delayed, nature will try to help the poor animal. An absorption of milk into the blood will to some extent take place, and that which remains in the udder will become deteriorated. When neglect to milk a cow at the regular time is repeated several times the secretion of the fluid is permanently checked; and there are many cases where by such neglect, an animal has become dry in less than a month.—Irish Farmer's Gazette.

CROWS.—We see it recommended to saturate corn intended for planting, in liquid poison so that crows when they eat it will die. We hope our farmers will not be guilty of such an act.

There is no bird that flies that destroys more worms and destructive insects than the crow. He saves the farmer hundreds of dollars in this way, and what are a few grains of corn? He needs them, poor fellow, for digestion, just as much as the farmer himself needs corn cake after having eaten bread made of wheat flour for six months. Don't disturb the crow. He is a thief by nature but this he cannot help Give him free range and if he steals worms let him steal a little corn.—Butler Herald.

A crow will eat a bushel of cut-worms, before he will take ten cents worth of corn.

Modern Courtship.

The system of love, courtship and marriage has undergone very radical changes since the days when Jacob devoted a considerable portion of his life to winning Leah, the tender eyed, and Rachael the beautiful. Who, in this age of steam, electricity and Atlantic cables, could devote seven years to paying those laborious attentions which have justly come to be called "serious"—so serious, indeed, that in many instances the fashionable pair are oppressed by a sad feeling of soberness during the remainder of their lives? Even Jacob himself, did he live in our time, would scout at the idea as preposterous. Fancy "the girl of the period" bombarded with flowers, at the rate of ten dollars per boquet, during seven mortal winters! Calculate how many miles of "Germans" the aspirants would dance during that space of time! Imagine the innumerable cups of tea he would imbibe in the domestic circle while on such long terms of intimacy with his beloved's family. No physical system could stand it. The most robust man would break down under the ordeal. Even Patrick himself, who from early youth has been brought up to constant and severe labor, would find it impossible, while "kapeing company" with Bridget, to "ice-cream and discourse her" for seven consecutive years. The world was made in seven days; but many of the enterprising youth of the present age have shown that all the courting necessary before marriage can be accomplished in much less time, Jacob to the contrary notwithstanding.—New York Evening Post.

A countryman bought a shirt in Raleigh, N. C. Was the first white shirt he ever owned. The next Sunday he was to be married, and that was the important occasion that had incited him to the purchase. The shirt had a nice starch bosom, and was open in the back—a style that was new to its possessor. After careful study he put it on with the opening in front, concluding that the stiff bosom was intended as a kind of shoulder-brace to make him stand erect. Thus dressed, he met the bride at the church door; but her knowledge was greater than his about shirts, and she made him go home and reverse his garment before she would allow the ceremony to proceed.

Black-eyed ladies are most apt to be passionate and jealous. Blue-eyed, soulful, truthful, affectionate, and confiding. Gray-eyed, philosophical, literary, resolute, cold-hearted. Hazel-eyed, quick-tempered and fickle.

VEGETINE

strikes at the root of disease by purifying the blood restoring the liver and kidneys to healthy action, invigorating the nervous system.

VEGETINE

Is not a vile, nauseous compound, which simply purges the bowels, but a safe, pleasant remedy which is sure to purify the blood, and thereby restore the health.

VEGETINE

Is now prescribed in cases of scrofula and other diseases of the blood by many of the best physicians, owing to its great success in curing all diseases of this nature.

VEGETINE

Does not deceive invalids into false hopes by purging and creating a factitious appetite, but assists nature in cleaning and purifying the whole system, leading the patient gradually to perfect health.

VEGETINE

Was tested upon as an experiment for some time by some of our best physicians but those most incredulous in regard to its merit are now its most ardent friends and supporters.

VEGETINE

Instead of being a puffed-up medicine has worked its way up to its astonishing present success by actual merit in curing all diseases of the blood, of whatever nature.

VEGETINE

Says a Boston physician, "has no equal as a blood purifier. Hearing of its many wonderful cures after all other remedies had failed, I visited the laboratory and convinced myself of its genuine merit. It is prepared from barks, roots and herbs, each of which is highly effective, and they are compounded in such a manner as to produce astonishing results."

VEGETINE

Is acknowledged and recommended by physicians and apothecaries to be the best purifier and cleanser of the blood of discovered, and thousands speak in its praise who have been restored to health.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

BOSTON, Feb. 13, 181.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—About one year since I found myself in a feeble condition from general debility. VEGETINE was strongly recommended to me by a friend who had been much benefitted by its use. I procured the article and after using several bottles, was restored to health and discontinued its use. I feel quite confident that there is no medicine superior to it for those complaints for which it is especially prepared, and would cheerfully recommend it to those who feel that they need something to restore them to perfect health. Respectfully yours,

P. L. PETTINGILL,

Firm of S. M. Pettengill & Co., 10 State st., Boston.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 26, 1872.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—The two bottles of VEGETINE furnished me by your agent, my wife has used with great benefit.

For a long time she has been troubled with dizziness and costiveness; these troubles are now entirely removed by the use of VEGETINE.

She was also troubled with Dyspepsia and general debility; and has been greatly benefitted.

NATICK, MASS., June 1st, 1872.

MR. H. H. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—Through the advice and earnest persuasion of Rev. E. S. Best, of this place, I have been taking VEGETINE for dyspepsia of which I have suffered for years.

I have used only two bottles and already feel myself a new man. Respectfully,

Dr. J. W. CARTER.

Report from a Practical Chemist and Apothecary.

BOSTON, Jan. 1, 1874.

Dear Sir—This to certify that I have sold at retail 15½ dozen (186) bottles of your VEGETINE since April 12, 1870, and can truly say that it has given the best satisfaction of any remedy for the complaints for which it is recommended, that I ever sold. Scarcely a day passes without some of my customers testifying to its merits on themselves or their friends. I am perfectly cognizant of several cases of scrofulous tumors being cured by VEGETINE alone in this vicinity. Very respectfully yours,

A. I. GILMAN, 448, Broadway.
