Wise Sayings.

Change seldom for changes are inconvenient.
Bear and blame not what you cannot change.
It is easier to avoid a fault than to acquire perfection.

Wise Sayings.

The tongue cannot easily be chaled when once let loose.
To grow up to the skies we must be planted low in the dust.
Evil men speak that which they wish rather than that which they know.

Wise Sayings.

A woman fascinates quite as often by what she overlooks as by what she sees.
Most fashions are ridiculous, but one is obliged to appear more ridiculous.
A word unspoken is a word in another's hand.

Wise Sayings.

The most delicate is the most sensible of all pleasures remains in promoting the pleasure of others.
The true secret of living at peace with all the world is to have a humble opinion of ourselves.
Flattery is like a ball, which if not adroitly used, will box your own ears instead of tickling those of the eun.

Wise Sayings.

If we waited until it was perfectly convenient, half of the good actions of life would never be accomplished.
The best humor is that which contains most humanity, that which is favored throughout with tenderness and kindness.
Our principles are the springs of our misery or happiness. Too much care, therefore, cannot be taken in forming our principles.

Wise Sayings.

It is not the height to which men are advanced that makes them giddy, it is the looking down with contempt upon those beneath.
There are those who shrink from making a beginning in religious life because they conceive that they lack the ability to pursue it.

Wise Sayings.

The most fruitful and natural exercise of the mind is conversation. We find the use of it more sweet than of any other action of life.
Diffidence often shrinks and withers as much upon the approach of intimacy as the sensitive plant does upon the touch of one's finger.
To confound wealth with happiness is to mistake the means for the end. You might as well fancy that a knife and fork will give you an appetite.

Wise Sayings.

The loss of friends is a wholesome grief, and the tears of sympathy are like balsam to the sufferer; but the loss of property is a wound that festers.
It is much better to decide difference between enemies than friends; for one of our friends will certainly become an enemy, and one of our enemies a friend.
Experience teaches, it is true; but she never teaches in time. Each event brings its lesson, and the lesson is remembered, but the same event never occurs again.

Wise Sayings.

If you wish to live the life of a man and not of a fungus, be social, be brotherly, be charitable, be sympathetic, and labor earnestly for the good of your kind.
The law of the pleasure in having done anything for another is that the one almost immediately forgets having given, and the other remembers eternally having received.
Enemies spring up everywhere of their own accord. Friends are reared in the affections, and cease to be such as soon as they are removed from the conservatory of the heart.

Wise Sayings.

Gratitude is like the good faith of traders—it maintains commerce; and we often pay, not because it is just to discharge our debts, but that we may more readily find people to trust us.
People who brood over their sorrows are usually successful in hatching a numerous family, and those who smother their wrath to keep it warm are sure of a comfortable temperature of indignation.

Wise Sayings.

A woman should never consent to be married secretly. She should distrust a man who has any reason to distrust in darkness the act which in his own estimation should be the crowning glory of his life.
The man who talks everlastingly and promissuously, who seems to have an exhaustless magazine of sound, crowds so many words into his thoughts that he always obscures and frequently conceals them.
An elevated purpose is a good and enabling thing, but we cannot begin at the top of it. We must work up to it by the often difficult path of daily duty—of daily duty always carefully performed.

Wise Sayings.

A perverse fellow may stumble and knock his nose against the ground a hundred times a day, and yet be more obstinate and assured than before, as if he supposed that, like the ancient sages of the earth, he assured new strength from each fall.
Our hearts are at least bright and blinding of love in the hour of meeting, and in the other hour when we part, inseparable; even as all the stars appear milder, larger and more lovely at their rising and setting, than when they were over our heads.

Wise Sayings.

It is an old saying, that "charity begins at home," but this is the reason that it should not go abroad. A man should live with the world as a citizen of the world; he may have a particular preference for the particular quarter, street or quarter, even an alley, in which he lives, but he should have a generous feeling for the welfare of the whole.
He that loses his conscience (says old Isaac Walton) has nothing that is worth keeping. Therefore be sure you look to that. And in the next place look to your health; and if you have it, praise God, and value it next to a good conscience, for health is the second blessing that we mortals are capable of, a blessing that money cannot buy; therefore, value it and be thankful for it.

Wise Sayings.

There is a way of doing good in the world, on a small scale, that is scarcely appreciated. A man who educates one child faithfully may effect a work of greater beneficence than one who has the name of a philanthropist.
The love consists in a family may produce richer fruit than that which embraces the world. Its action is more intense and visible, but its results may go abroad and leave the whole mass of a community.
The idleness he does not stop to complain that there are so many poisonous flowers and thorny branches in the road, but buzzes on, selecting the honey where he can find it, and passing quietly by the places where it is not. There is enough in this world to complain about and find fault with if man had the disposition. We often travel on a hard and uneven road; but with a cheerful spirit and a heart to praise heaven for its mercies, we may walk therein with comfort and come to the end of our journey in peace.

Wise Sayings.

The worst wheel makes the most noise.
Change seldom for changes are inconvenient.
Bear and blame not what you cannot change.
It is easier to avoid a fault than to acquire perfection.
