THE LIABILITIES OF R. R. COMPANIES. We give below the charge of Hon. William Elwell, in the case of John J. McHenry vs. The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Co., which was tried last week and resulted in a verdict for the defindants. The charge will be of interest as explaining where and how railroads companies are liable for goods entrusted to them and under what cirums ances they cease to be responsible :

Gentlemen of the jury: This is an action brought by John J. McHenry against the Del-aware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company, to recover the value of a barrel of sugar, for which the plaintiff alleges the defendants became liable, by reason of its having been committed to their charge for transportation and also by reason of its remaining in their custody as warehousemen.

The liability of a common carrier is very strict; he is, in fact, considered as an insurer of the property entrusted to him, and is bound to deliver it at all events, the acts of God and of the public enemy only excepted: but, when the roperty has been carried to its destination, and there deposited in a warehouse to wait he ended, and he becomes the dary of the carrier ended, and he becomes thenceforth responsible only as a warehouseman, a baitce, bound to take such care as a pradent man takes of his own goods, and liable only for neglect in protecting and preserving it for a reasonable time, or for carclessness in delivering it to some other. or for carciessness in delivering it to some other person than the consignee or his authorized agent. In this case if the sugar was lost, the burden of proof is upon the plaintiff to show that such loss was caused by want of ordinary care on the part of the railroad company. It is not necessary that the company should give ness in delivering it to some oth is not necessary that the company should give netural notice of the arrival of the goods to the thousands of persons with whom they deal, thousands of persons with the persons with the persons who they deal, thousands of persons with the persons with the persons which whom they deal, thousands of persons with the persons which whom they deal, the persons which was also become the persons which who the persons which we have the perso things that usually occur, and therefore, the general certainty of the safe and prompt arrival of goods by railroad is a sufficient constructive notice. The railroad company, in this case, receives nothing for storage beyond the consideration that by taking care it will encour age and induce business upon the line of it road. You will have no difficulty under the evidence in this case, in coming to the conclu-sion that the only liability of the defendants is that of warchousemen. Was the property pro-perly cared for while at the depot? and was it delivered to the plaintiff? Upon the first point, we hear no allegation to the contrary; the building was kept locked the company's agents were in charge; nothing was stolen. Upon the other point; if the sugar was delivered to any person duly authorized to receive it for Mr. McHenry, then the railroad company is not liable, although the sugar may never have reached Mr. McHenry; if it was taken from the depot by either Mr. Long, the stage driver, (who, it seems, was authorized to carry goods for Mr. McHenry,) or by Mr. Alberson the teamster, (whom the plaintiff employed to haul his goods or if, at the request of Mr. Long,) the barrei of sugar was put out upon the plainform and checked off as delivered, then in either of these cases it was no longer in charge of the railroad as the keeper of a warehouse, and the responsibility of the company as carriers or as warehousemen was equally at an en . But, if the company or its agents delivered the sugar-to any person unauthorized to receive it, that was a negligent delivery and makes the warehouseman liable, as does a non-delivery, or a refusal to deliver upon the ground that the goods cannot be found, unless he can show owner must show that this happened in cons pance of the company's neglect to provide the smal safeguards. After the sugar was placed men the platform (if you believe that,) at the of plaintiff's risk, because it was out of the de-st and no longer under the company's control, that there was then an entire discharge of lliability on the part of the companys; and all liability on the part of the companys; and if the sugar was then taken away by some-bady else, was lost or stolen, or whatever be came of it, the company was not responsible. If it be found that the augar was defivered to Mr. Long, and that he was Mr. Mellenry's agent for the purpose of receiving and handing his goods; or to Mr. Albertson, and that he was likewise Mr. Mellenry's agent, or to any other authorized person, then the plaintiff cannot recover, and your verdict will be for the defendants. It on the other hand, you find that this barrel of sugar was lost by the neglect of the railtond company, then the plaintiff would the railroad company, then the plaintiff would be called to recover the value of the sugar at the depot—the price (which he stated, was 10) cons per pound, for either 287 or 293 pounds, one of the (wo barrels,) with the freight added, and interest upon the value, and your verdict would be for the plaintiff so many dollars and
