Something About Coral.

Coral is not something which is built, but is a thing which grows. It is simply the skeleton of many united skeletons of polyps. When the polyps die and disappear, we see the solid coral itself. Polyps grow in ens, fungi, mosses, ferns, herbs, shrubs and trees. Formerly they were regarded as plants. Their colors are as remarkable as their forms and some polyp communities

In doing so the beast tore the boy's left cheek, from the corner of his mouth nearly to his ear wide open. Then he cutled him with his cruel claws upon the right side of his chin, tearing open the flesh in a frightful manner. All this time the boy struggled and cried for help. pear that at least a quarter of them died At the appearance of the keeper the lion rolled the boy upon his stomach, and with one paw upon his back held him there helpess, all the time showing his teeth and roaring at the keeper, who he diated about entering the van. It was only for an instant, owever, for, armed with a large revolver and a whip, the keeper jumped into the cage, and striking the beast over the nose, caused him to retreat, releasing the boy. Young Marvin was not long in getting out of the cage, and immediately on his escape fainted away and purely from fright. The keeper followed him, and closing the cage left the lion to growl out his disatisfaction at being thwarted. Beside the bad wounds on the boy's face his right shoulder was trightfully incerated, five or six slight wounds were on his right arm, while five large incisions, regularly placed on the left side of the boy's back, plainly marked the size of the lion's paw as he held his victim, - Detroit Free Press.

THE LOOM OF LIFE. OV ROEN R. REVFORD.

Poetical.

All day, all night I can hear the jar of the loom of life, and near and far It thrills with its deep and muffied sound. As the tircless wheels go always around. usily, ceaselessly goes the loom

In the light of day and the midnight's gloom The wheels are turning early and late. And the woof is wound in the warp of fate.

Click, clack ! there's a thread of love wove in ; pound Syrup of Wild Cherry lick, clack ! another of wrong and sin ; What a checkered thing will this life be When we see it unrolled in eternity !

> Time, with a face like a mystery, And liands as busy as hands can be,

Sits at the loom with its warp outspread. To eatch in its meshes each glancing thread, When shall this wonderfr' web he done ? In a thousand years, perhaps, or one : Or to-morrow. Who knoweth? Not you nor I, But the wheels turn on and the shuttles fly.

Ah, sad eyed weaver, the years are slow, But each one is nearer the end I know. And some day the last thread shall be we God grant it be love instead of sin.

Are we aphaners of wood for this life-web-say?

Do we furnish the weaver a thread each day It were better then, on my friend, to spin A benutiful thread than a thread of stn.

GOD'S PLANS.

Sometline, when all life's lessons have been learne And sun and stars forevermore have set, The things which our weak judgment here has spirned, The things o'er which we grieved with lashes wet Will flash before us out of life's dark hight, As stars shifte most in deeper tints of blue ; And shall we see how all God's plans were right, And how what seemed reproof was love most tr

And we shall see, that while we frown and sloth, God's plans go on as best for you and me ; How, when we called, He heeded not our cry,

Because H's wisitom to the end could see. And even as prodent parents disallow Too much of aweet to craving babyhood, So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now

Life's sweetest things because it seemsth good And if, sometimes, commingled with life's wine.

We find the wormwood, and rebet and stak, Be sure a wiser hand than yours or nine, Pours out this portion for our lips to drink. And if some friend we love is ising low, Where human kisses cannot reach his face, oh, do not blame the loving Father so, But bear your server with obedient grace !

And you shall shortly know that lengther breath Is not the sweetest gift God sends his friend, And that, sometimes, the sable pail of death Conceals the fairest bloom his love can send. If we could push ajar the gates of life. And stand within, and all God's workings see,

We could interpret all this doubt and strife, And for each mystery could find a key. But not to-day. Then be content, poor heart : God's plans, like fulles pure and white, unfold. We must not tear the close shut leaves apart— Time w⁽¹⁾ reveal the caly xes of gold.

And if, through patient toll we reach the land, Where tired feet, with sandais loose, may rest, When we shall clearly know and understand, I think that we will say that "told knows best.

Then he gave the signal for the attack by firing his pistol, and followed by his 150 Cossacks, he rode headlong into the enemy's camp of 6000 or 7000 men, shouting and yelling like fiends, and cutting down everything in their passage. For a quarter of an hour the plain resounded with shricks and yells, shots, the trampling of horses, shouts and groans, and all the uproar of battle. Then all was silence. Skobeleff assembled his Cossacks, and when morning came he found that the whole army of the enemy, 6000 or 7000 men had disappeared, leaving on the field about 40 dead, 2000 or 3000 muskets and sabres, all their camp material and baggage. But what was his astonishment on calling the roll to discover that he had not lost a man either killed or wounded !

The book was brought. The Emperor was right. The whole assembly were astonished at such an excellent memory on the part of one whose head was constantly occupied with ther subjects.

"When I was a lieutenant," said the emperor. These simple words, "when I was a leutenant," produced a singular effect on all present; all the representatives of the old monarchies looked at each other smiling. 'When I had the honor to be a lieutenant of artillery," continued the emperor in a louder tone, "I remained two years in garrison in a city of Dauphin, which had but a single circulating library.
