A RURNING SHAME -About noon on Sun day the body of a male infant, in premature state, was found upon the creek bank, near Williamsport Bulletin. the water's edge, at the rear of Michael Mixell's lot. A crowd soon gathered at the spot curious to learn what was going on. In. Hughes took the little body for examination and afterward turned it over to Policeman Smuthera for burial. How, and by whom, the child was placed here will probably remain a mystery. That it was an infanticide no one can reasonably deny, and it should be inquired into by the authorities - Echo.

We have sometimes wondered what would when have sometimes wondered what wond be the result on the virtue and morality of ar community, were the newspaper annals of crime and vice to be supplanted by full reflection of all the eage of modification intermonths of all the cases of unflinching integity, noble heroism and disinterested benevence. It would, indeed, be a truly alarmag state of things, did the actual proportion of good and eyil in society at large corres- coes go to Lutz & Sloan's, and with that presented to us in many of the subtle prints. We read with startling tropping of perty thefts and large emberdements of dishonorable failures and swindling transactions, of intemperance, extravasome and rain, of slander, faithlessness and pression, of cowardice, brutality and murr, and a host of other wrongs and miseries but may well make the heart sicken and lespair at the social condition thus repreented. For a score of such recitals there will be a single brief mention of some courageous deed or generous action, of some life of high resolve or undaunted perseverance or honorable suffering. In private conversution the same preponderence of evil report over good may be observed. If an individual he discussed, it is usually his faults and foibles that are brought into notice, rather than his good points ; if a scene be recountad, the impression is heightened by a vivid coloring of the imperfections or absurdities of some one who figured in its Strangely enough, there seems to be an actual preference for exposing the defects of person, man-to the light whatever beauty, grace or excellence may exist Whatever may be the cause why evil is hus made prominent, we are happy in the billef that it does not occupy the larger share in human life and conduct. On the contrary the good far outweighs the evil. There is more honesty than cheating, more fidelity than falseness, more kindness than eruelty, more sincerity than hypocrisy, more have than hate. The homage of the world is paid to good, not to evil. However much a man may err, it is truth and not error that obtains his reverence.
