SNATCHED FROM NIAGARA FROM BELGRAVIA MAGAZINE. 'Yes, stranger, it is a mighty fine fall. uess Niagara beats creation for bigness You curiosity-hunters can't find a dip of water better worth eyeing over in all your jaunts anywhere. Well, you see, it's just an ocean, as it were, rolling over that lime tone ledge. Foam, spray, and thunderme dull, eternal, awful roar, spanned by hifting rainbows-that's it. 'I hate it, but I calculate the sight's nut o you. You think that nature's got it up ine for you to stroll down to, after breakast at Forsyth's. 'It's like an entertainment provided for those who house at our hotels; something the to draw customers and tot up a jolly return tisks hereabo

You'd hardly think we were coming upon this. The country up river is flattish. The river slides along quiet enough, too. No craga, no precipices, no darksome forests ; all is fertile and good to the eye of manjust peace and plenty. It is different, though as the sound of the thunder abesd grows up on you, dull, awful, everiasting, that he sounded on from creation, and will outlas you and me, stranger, and thousands of gen erations yet to come. "Where I lived was, as I said, but a f miles above this. Farther down the cala flow of the river swirls into ripples, and whirls and grows scared like of what's be fore it. Then it exercises itself for the hel it is to pass through. It tastes purgatory It's all toam and dash, and splutter and growl, through the frothy rapids that rough en it for a whole. Then it settles for steady work. It braces itself for endurance, an then pluckily smooths itself to face its fate 'How grand that calm, deep flood is that stranger, smooth and peaceable as it looks t's deep enough to astonish weak nerves o iron ones, as I know well, and you'll know before I ve done, if my tongue does its duty 'Just look across the fall. You see it bes from the British side. Run your eye roun the great horse-shoe near you. That curve some two thousand feet broad and hundred and fifty feet deep. Then there is Goat Is land, anug in the midst of the mighty plunge Can you see a small, flat speck of rock ne so many yards off its shores? No? I know it, as you'll hear. Our American fall be yond knuckles under a little to this nearto us But it's a mighty respectable water -hed, too. Twelve hundred feet in breadth a hundred and fifty high. You know-als guess that every passing minute some seven hundred thousand tons of good fresh river roll over that rock into spray and foam in the dim gulf below. 'As a boy, I used to see beauty as well a wonder in all this. Where it's not hid white with foam, see what a clear sea-green th flood is as it shoots over. You can meaure the force of the rush of waters, for th curve of the shining sheet is fifty feet from the wall of the rock it slips down. 'How does it strike you? You see it, dare say, I saw it two score years ago. To you it is terrible, but not all terror. It's lovey, too. And to me? well, to me it is horro only ; it has been so since that day when hung on its very brink for hours, and though of it as one might think in a nightman dream of some hideous thing, inconceivable unutterable, that held one in its awful grasp

It has lived there ever since, night and day, eason and season. There it will stay til the death rattle kills the memory of all this side my coffin.

'I hunted and fished then. That's how ived. Visitors then came pretty plentiful o see this wonder. I caught, whether it was fur or fin. I had canoed it from when could recollect anything, and pretty

'Minutes that had seemed hours had pase d, and I was struggling frantically, steaming with my frenzied exertions. I had wor ome way. I had edged some distance from the central rush of the river, and safety would be found in the slower waters that skirted the bank, could I but reach them. 'I bent still more madly to the effort In moment I had lost my hold of existence, nd was rushing, helpless and hopeless, to the dreadful fate I had been fighting against,

One of my paddles, overstrained, had brok en, and, at the mercy of the mighty flood, I it securely, was speeding every minute more swiftly to what I knew so well - what I saw as plainly with my mind's eye as I had thousands of mes seen it with my living sight.

'How I saw all we are looking down on ere! Not a sight, not a sound, we are see ng and hearing, but it was in that moment eard and seen by me more vividly than ow. I was literally bewildered with the par I now hear so cat ly. 'I shricked aloud in my agony as I clasp ed my useless hands over my sight, vainly, to shut out the smooth side of the inland ea, as I saw it flashing back the morning un as it leapt into the misty gulf into whose hunder it shot.

'A tew moments bore me down to th apids. A few more moments I was through them-safely. How I escaped wreck among hem puzzles me. I was too pacalyzed with orror to use my one paddle to in any way teer my light craft through the foaming arrents on which it tossed. Its lightness ust have saved it. Had it been a beavier uilt boat it would have been dashed to shreds a score of times before we reached mooth water. As it was, it danced slong, rolicking, as it seemed to me, with a ghast hurried.
